GREAT ALLIED VICTORY

Germans Driven From Noyon; British Near Bapaume; 10,000 Prisoners and 52 Villages Taken as Foe Retreats

With the British Army in France, Aug. 23.--General Byng's troops are within 6,000 yards of the great German base of Bapaume. Tanks, armored cars and whole flocks of aviators are taking part today in the British drive on both sides of the Somme River.

The Germans are evacuating Noyon, their great base on the Oise River in France, according to the Echo de Paris. The fall of Noyon, key position to the German lines northwest of Soissons, will be a bitter blow to the Germans and particularly to the Kaiser. Only a few days ago, when the successive smashes by General Foch began to threaten the stronghold on the Oise, the Kaiser issued this imperial order to his harassed troops: "HOLD NOYON AT ALL COSTS."

The armies of General Mangin and General Humbert, according to the Echo de Paris, have captured fifty-two villages from the retreating Germans in the past four days. Reuter's correspondent at London issued a statement today that General Mangin's troops advanced six and one-quarter miles at certain points north of Soissons yesterday.

An earlier Reuter dispatch from London said that the Germans were in full retreat between the Matz and Aisne Rivers on a 31-mile front, with much material abandoned. (It was believed, however, that this cable referred rather to ground between the Oise and the Aisne, as the Germans had already been routed from the terrain between the Aisne and Matz.)

A Paris dispatch says that General Mangin's forces have taken 5,000 prisoners since Wednesday in the Noyon-Soissons sector. This brings the total for the thrust up to about 15,000. To these should be added another 5,000 prisoners taken by the British north of the Ancre in the past two days.

The fall of Noyon, as reported in Paris, means a particularly effective thrust of the spear-head which General Foch is driving eastward to split the armies of General von Boehm (north of the Oise) and of the German Crown Prince (south of the Oise).

The French advance has been so rapid, as London hears the story, that the War Office has actually been unable to keep track of the movements of some of the troops. This may explain the report of the evacuation of Noyon so early in proceedings.

While the French are driving ahead in the southern part of the battle front, the British have continued to hammer the boche, to the north on both sides of the Somme River.

The capture of Albert by the British, officially announced last night, marks another important step in the breaking up of the German line of resistance. The report of the British War Office today said that fighting was going on all the way from Lihons, below the Somme River, to the Cojeul River, south of Arras. Haig's men are still advancing, even though the German resistance has grown much stiffer.

War critics agree today that the Germans cannot long remain in their present positions. The question now seems to be just how

MELLEN'S WIFE ASKS DIVORCE

Accuses Railroad Man of Kicking Her; Petitions for Children and $500,000 Alimony

Pittsfield, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Charles S. Mellen, wife of the former President of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, filed a petition for divorce in the Berkshire County Superior Court here today, asking the custody of her four minor children now with their father, and $500,000 alimony and making these specific charges:

That Mr. Mellen on two occasions struck, beat, kicked or bruised her.

That he made false and cruel charges against her and cruelly and wantonly attempted to blast and disgrace her.

That he was guilty of other grievous acts of cruel and inhuman treatment.

Such was the initial drive launched by Mrs. Katherine Livingston Mellen against the suit of separation which Mr. Mellen has pending in the Berkshire Court.

Mrs. Mellen asks that she be given the custody of her four minor children while her divorce action is pending and thereafter. The children are Amory, Candace K., Raymond and Priscilla.

Mrs. Mellen told a Boston AMERICAN reporter on the phone today that she had nothing to add to the statement given out by her lawyer. She referred all inquiries to her lawyers.

Miss Katherine L. Mellen, the eldest

Must Beat Germany Till She Can War No More, Declares Lodge

By International News Service.

Washington, Aug. 23.—There is only one way to secure the conditions for which the allies fight and that is by reducing Germany to a condition whereby in no possibility can she precipitate another war for universal conquest, Senator Lodge, ranking Republican of the Foreign Relations Committee, told the Senate this afternoon.

"Belgium must be restored. Alsace and Lorraine must be returned to France, unconditionally returned—not merely because sentiment and eternal justice demand it, but because the iron and coal of Lorraine must be forever taken from Germany.

"Italia Irredenta—all those are as where the Italian race is predominant, including Trieste—must go back to Italy.

"Serbia and Rumania must be established in their independence.

"Greece must be made secure.

332 CASUALTIES CONTAINED IN 3 WAR LISTS

Washington, D. C., Aug. 23.—Three hundred and thirty-two names appear on two army casualty lists and one marine list issued today through the War and Navy Departments. The combined army lists contained a total of 260 names, divided as follows:

Killed in action, 48; died of wounds, 42; died of accident, 7; died of disease, 13; wounded severely, 53; wounded, degree undetermined, 25; missing in action, 72.

The Marine losses were the heaviest announced in several days. They numbered 72, of which three were killed in action. Four died of wounds, one died of disease, ten were severely wounded, 49 were wounded, degree undetermined, and five are missing in action.

There are 47 New England names on the two army lists and three on the

HOOVER BACK FROM LONDON FOOD MEETING

An Atlantic Port, Aug. 23.—Herbert C. Hoover, United States food administrator, arrived here today from England.

A staff of government experts accompanied Mr. Hoover, the party arriving on a big British liner. The American food chief was in excellent spirits, chatting freely with newspaper men and indicating that a statement he will soon issue will contain optimistic reports on the food question in Europe.

Other notables on the liner were Louis Strauss, Alexander Smith, Dr. Alonzo Taylor and Sir Robert L. Borden, premier of Canada.

U-BOAT SINKS TANKER OFF NANTUCKET

An Atlantic Port, Aug. 23.—The American tanker Diomed has been sunk by German submarines operating off the Atlantic coast. This word was brought here today by 104 members of the crew of the vessel, who arrived today on board another British tank vessel. According to the survivors, who were picked up in open lifeboats, the Diomed was sunk 200 miles off Nantucket. Most of the crew are Chinese.

The Diomed was owned by the Booth line, plying between north and south Atlantic ports.

One member of the Diomed's crew said that his vessel was sunk by shell fire from the U-boat and that several of the crew were injured by splinters, when the superstructure of the vessel was hit.

A Swedish steamer, also arriving here today reported that yesterday at noon she was halted by a U-boat off Nantucket and that her captain was ordered aboard the submersible. He was later released.

EMPRESS VICTORIA ILL KAISER HURRIES TO BEDSIDE

London, Aug. 23. — Empress Augusta Victoria of Germany is ill, according to the Berliner Lokal Anzeiger the Empress has broken down under the strain of the war and from the war relief work she has been doing. The Kaiser is hurrying to her side at Castle Wilhelmshohe.

Castle Wilhelmshohe is where Emperor Napoleon III. was taken after his capture at Sedan in 1870.

LAWSON TO EXPOSE WEEKS

Financier, Protesting "Boodlers' Slaying" of McCall, Asks About Banking and Politics

"I am going into the senatorial fight. From now until election I'm going to raise hell. I'm going to be an evangelist preaching a sermon on the murder of Samuel W. McCall by 'Big Boodle.' I'm going to speak at every country fair, at every political meeting, Democratic and Republican. I have organized the 'Lawson War Fund,' a corporation to collect funds for war charities. This fund will make some others look like neverwases."

So Thoma W. Lawson, financier and author, declared today at his country home at Dreamwold, Egypt, a section of the town of Scituate.

Mr. Lawson continued: "If I'm elected, and I'm going to be elected, I'm going to show the political bunch that they know as little about their own game as Militades did about the Browning machine gun.

JUST THREE THINGS.

"The day I am elected my resignation goes into the hands of a committee of solid, selected citizens, to take effect when during my senatorial career I shall have accomplished three things. This trinity o. deeds will be:

"1—I shall force an investigation of the election of John W. Weeks six years ago.

"2—I shall force an investigation into the manner in which the First National Bank of Boston, in which Weeks is interested, grew from a little bank with a capital of $100,000, a surplus of $100,000 and deposits of $4,000,000, into a great bank with a capital of $7,000,000, a surplus of $10,450,000 and deposits of $170,000,000.

SOMERVILLE TAX RATE HIGHEST EVER, $23.20

Somerville's tax rate, $23.20, announced today, is the highest in the city's history. It is an increase of $1.20 over last year, notwithstanding an increase of $1,312,500 in real estate and $4,405,300 in personal property. The totol valuation is placed at $34,639,280. There are 24,291 in the poll tax. The total amount to be raised by taxation is $2,586,815.81.

BOLSHEVIK VICTORY IN SIBERIA

Allies Forced to Give Way in Fierce Battle on the Ussuri, Near Vladivostok

London, Aug. 23.—News of a big battle between the Bolsheviki and British, French, Cossack and Czecho-Slovak forces on the Ussuri River, north of Vladivostok, reached here from Harbin today.

The allied troops were greatly outnumbered in the struggle and have been compelled to fall back on the whole front, the dispatch adds.

A Japanese force reached the scene in time to co-operate in the retirement.

An Amsterdam dispatch says that General Petahoff, commander of the Bolshevik forces in Murmansk, has been captured by the allies. He is now in the hands of the British.

It is reported that 200 Czecho-Slovak soldiers taken prisoners by the Red Guards have been hanged in a public square in Simbirsk on the Volga River.

FOUR KILLED IN EXPLOSION ON U.S. TRANSPORT

Washington, Aug. 23.—Four men were killed and eighteen wounded by the explosion of a depth charge on the U. S. S. Orizaba, a troop transport, at sea, August 17, the Navy Department announced this afternoon. The vessel carried no troops.

The dead are: Lieutenant Commander William P. Williamson, New York; Samuel T. Lambert, oiler, Riverside, N. Y.; Frank Mayer, baker, Cincinnati, and Arthur K. Baird, seaman, Pittsburgh. Commander R. D. White, captain of the vessel, had his jaw broken.

STEAMER FROM U. S. REPORTED TORPEDOED

An Atlantic Port, Aug. 23.—A report that the American steamer Cubore, a new vessel of 7,181 tons gross register, has been torpedoed in European waters, was received in marine circles here. No details were received.

AMERICA TURNS TIDE OF WAR SAYS BORDEN

Canadian Premier Returns With Glowing Accounts of Allies' Renewed Confidence

By International News Service.

An Atlantic Port, Aug. 23.—"America turned the tide in favor of the allies." So declared Sir Robert L. Borden, Premier of Canada, who reached here today from Europe with a large staff of Canadian officials.

"Never has the spirit of the allies been better or that of the armies more unified than at present," the Premier said. "We arrived in England just after the German drive in the North and the Austrian drive in Italy had started. The gloom that was occasioned by these two events has been entirely dissipated by the present allied successes.

"Since I left Quebec last May more than a million troops have been transported overseas from the United States and Canada. It is impossible to overestimate the confidence brought about by the arrival of the American troops in Europe. All Europe has been impressed by their splendid physique, their resourcefulness and their magnificent fighting qualities."

Premier Borden said the Americans, the French, the British and the Canadians were fighting in complete accord, with a lone aim—"Victory."

The allied navies, too, are working in full harmony, Premier Borden said. The premier recently had long conferences with Sir David Beatty and Admiral Sims and Admiral Rodman.

"The Canadian troops are fighting very heroically, the averred, "and are glad of the opportunity to fight for their mother country. The recent successes are the best evidence of that."

DESERTER UNDER 25-YEAR SENTENCE RECAPTURED

Camp Devens, Aug. 23.—A guard from the Depot Brigade brought to camp today from Hartford Ct., a man under the name of "Robert B. Holland," who is Private Robert G. MacGowan of Battery B, 303d Artillery, according to the provost guard officers. MacGowan escaped from the cantonment guard house early in April, a few days before a general court-martial sentence of twenty-five years at hard labor against him was announced. He had been arrested in Boston March 11, charged with breaking and entering, and he was court-martialled for robbery and desertion.

SHIPWORKERS OF U. S. DEMAND $1 AN HOUR

By International News Service.

Washington, Aug. 23.—Every shipyard in the country through representatives of the unions of the allied shipbuilding trades has demanded $1 an hour for the workmen, double time for overtime and a half day on Saturday it was authoritatively learned today.

Hearings on the demands are proceeding today, it was learned. Unless the demands are granted, it was stated by a Shipping Board official, a nation-wide strike is possible.

The men making the demands are representatives of the workers in every shipyard on the Pacific coast, the Great Lakes, the Gulf of Mexico and the Atlantic coast.

Men on the Pacific coast are getting $5.77 a day and men on the Atlantic coast are getting from $5.80 to $6.50 a day.

great their retirement will be. It is expected that the Germans will try to put up stiff rear-guard actions. Military men say that that will be the most serious resistance he will be able to offer.

Yankee Aviators Bag Enemy Machine and Bomb Railroads

Washington, Aug. 23.—American aviators continue to conduct successful raids upon railroad yards behind the enemy lines, General Pershing reports in his communique for Aug. 22, made public by the War Department today. The text follows:

"Section A—North of the Vesle a successful raiding party brought in 11 prisoners. Hostile raids in Lorraine and in Alsace were repulsed.

"Northwest of Toul one of our aviators shot down a hostile machine. On Aug. 21 and 22, our aviators successfully bombed the railroad yards at Longuyon, Audun le Roman and Conflans, 72 tons and a half tons of bombs were dropped and many direct hits were observed. All of our machines returned."

British Advance on Wide Front From Lihons to the Cojeul River

London, Aug. 23.—11:30 a. m.—Fighting continued along the British front in France last night all the way from Lihons to the Cojeul River, the British War Office announced today.

Enemy attacks during the night were repulsed. The War Office also reported another advance in the Lys sector.

"Lihons is just above Chaulnes and to southeast of Amiens, while the Cojeul River is a few miles directly south of Arras.)

The text of the official statement follows:

"Fighting is taking place on practically the whole front between Lihons, south of th tSomme River, and the Cojeul River.

"Our troops are reported to be making progress at a number of points.

"During the night the enemy twice attacked our positions in the neighborhood of Dailleseourt farm, east of Beaucourt, and was repulsed.

"On the Lys front our line has been advanced slightly east of Le Touret, northwest of Neuf Berquin and east of Outtersteene.

"A local hostile attack northwest of Bailleul broke down before our positions."

French Smash Way to Southern Banks of the Oise and Ellette

Paris, Aug. 23.—(Noon)—French troops have smashed their way forward to Guny and Pont-St. Marc on the Ellette River, the French War Office announced at noon today.

Further north they have advanced their line along the southern bank of the Oise to the railroad line running to Coucy-le-Chateau.

The text of the War Office statement follows:

"There were violent bombardments in the region between Beauraines and the Oise, particularly at Lepleumont, Passel-Chiry and Ourseamps during the night.

"We hold the southern bank of the Oise and the Ellette from Sempigny to the railroad line to Coucy-le-Vesle. French troops have carried their line to Guny and Pont St. Marc.

"Elsewhere the night was calm."

Crown Prince Courting Peril in Endeavor to Hold Lines at Vesle

With the Americans on the Aisne-Vesle Front, Aug. 23.—There is much evidence to strengthen the belief that the German Crown Prince is making the utmost preparation to prevent being forced far back from the Vesle line.

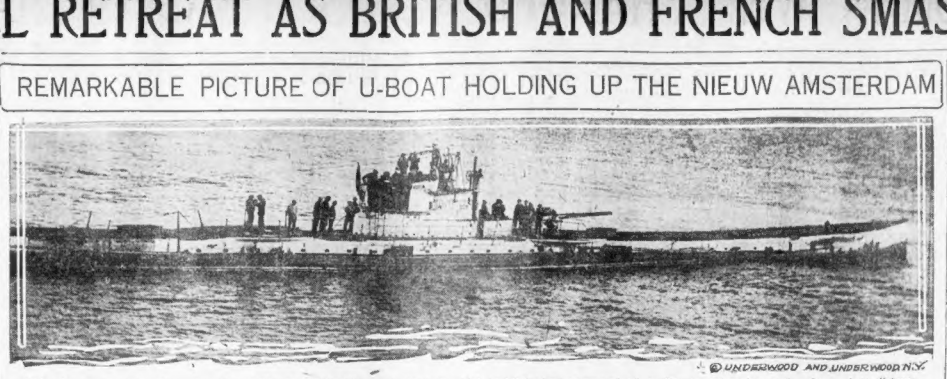
Such a retirement would lengthen his front and also impose upon him the difficult situation of rectifying the line north of Rheims, as the line passes Berry-au-Bac, which is always a vulnerable enemy position. It exposes the Crown Prince to debouching place for allied attacks in the Champagne and against Laon, which are of the highest strategical importance to the enemy.

Hindenburg evinces comprehension of the Vesle front by leaving thirty-four divisions at his disposal of the army holding between Braine and Jouchery. This army is believed to be commanded by the Crown Prince personally, as Generals Von Wichtrat, Von Mudra, Von Kathen, Von Schmettow and Fritz von Below each have been relieved of command since the Marne fiasco. (It has been reported from Rome that the Crown Prince has been "relieved" of his command for six months.)

The Americans have established the fact that the Fourth Prussian Guards and the crack 29th and 17th divisions are still opposing them, although machine gun allotments have been doubled to make possible a lengthier defence with minimum losses in case of attack.

The Germans are still holding two bridgeheads south of the Vesle and east of Saint Thibaud and Fringe railway yards, south of Chateau de Diable, but both are at the mercy of the Americans whenever they wish to take them. The enemy has constructed steel machine gun "pill boxes," but the Americans hold higher ground, which enables them to blast them from the earth's surface with artillery at will.

REMARKABLE PICTURE OF U-BOAT HOLDING UP THE NIEUW AMSTERDAM



© UNDERWOOD AND UNDERWOOD N.Y.

This picture was taken from the deck of the steamship Nieuw Amsterdam, which had halted at command of a German submarine, and only a short distance away. The liner left Rotterdam on the 3rd of August, and after two days at sea she was stopped by a sea raider off the Norwegian coast. The submarine shot at the liner, but did not hit her. The liner stopped and put to sea a boat in which the chief officer took his place to show the ship's papers. The submarine disappeared when she sighted a vessel on the horizon which was perhaps an English cruiser. This photograph shows the officers of the Nieuw Amsterdam on board the submarine. PROPAGANDISTS ATTACKED BY HURLEY

By International News Service.

Washington, Aug. 23.—Warning against enemy propaganda seeking to arouse distrust among the allies and based on the fact that America is building a mighty fleet of food ships and transports, which after the war will be used in America's ocean-carrying trade, was sounded today by Chairman Edwin N. Hurley, of the shipping board.

"Guarantees of fair dealing in this matter," declared Hurley, "are found in America's unselfish policy in fighting democracy, in President Wilson's devotion to the cause of humanity and also in America's past record.

"It is unthinkable that a nation fighting shoulder to shoulder with other great democracies should, after the war, turn its resources against them for trade conquests of the very kind which were largely instrumental in bringing on the war. If our ships don't bring prosperity to our neighbors as well as ourselves, our own pride in the achievement will be diminished.

"In building her merchant fleet," continued Hurley, "America plans of all to win the war, and after that to overcome her own neglect in providing ocean transportation for her own trade. Suggestions of selfish motives will of course be circulated in connection with the fleet we are building.

"Every nation lined up against autocracy can be depended upon to detect the source of such suggestions and discount them and maintain the solid lines for democracy and humanity till the end."

"Sex War" Prevented by Equal Pay, Says Y. W. C. A. Council

Washington, Aug. 23.—There is no danger of a "sex war" in this country because of the employment of women in industry, the Y. W. C. A. War Work Council announced today.

"The national war labor board," said a representative of the council, "has stood squarely for the proposition of equal pay for equal work, and its first step in this direction was with the General Electric Company at Pittsfield, Mass., where equal conditions for men and women prevail."

"The big problem today," said a Y. W. C. A. war council official, "is not any problem of a sex war, but to place women in industry so that they can release fighting men for the proveat marshal general and the Department of Labor."

we mean it to be safe, the great Slav populations now under the government of Austria—the Jugo-Slavs and the Czecho-Slovaks, who have been used to aid the Germans, whom they loathe—must be established as independent States.

"The Polish people must have an independent Poland. And we must have these independent states created so that they will stand across the path of Germany to the east. Nothing is more vital than this for a just, righteous and an enduring peace.

"The Russian provinces taken from Russia by the villainous peace of Brest-Litovsk must be restored to Russia. The President, as you all remember, has announced the vast importance of sustaining Russia. If Germany continues to hold a large part of Russia the world for years to come will be under the shadof of another great war, which will surely be precipitated upon us when Germany has developed her Russian possessions to the point of yielding her men, money and supplies.

"Constantinople must be finally taken away from Turkey and placed in the hands of allied nations as a free port, so as to bar German's way to the East and hold the Dardanelles for the benefit of mankind.

"We must not be beguiled into concessions to Turkey in the hope of separating her from Germany. It would be a miserable outcome to have Turkey retained in Europe, a cure to her subjects and neighbors, a plague spot and a breeder of wars.

WALSH TRIES TO AVERT STRIKE AT BRIDGEPORT

Washington, Aug. 23.—Frank P. Walsh, joint chairman of the National War Labor Board, left today for Bridgeport, Ct., in an effort personally to mediate the difficulties between the employers there and 50,000 machinists who are threatening to strike. The machinists have had their case before the board for some time and have been growing impatient. They are demanding the right to organize, an increase in wages, and a basic eight-hour day.

daughter, is with Mrs Mellen at the Hotel Maplewood here.

In naming a half-million dollars for alimony, Mrs. Mllen states that she desires it for proper support of herself and such children as may be committed to her care.

She says that the beating, kicking, striking and bruising, which she alleges against her husband, were committed on or about November 18, 1916, and June 7, 1917.

The divorce action was filed for Mrs. Mellen by her counsel, Milton R. Warner of Pittsfield. Mrs. Mellen has been at the Maplewood Hotel since Tuesday. It was supposed she was here to contest the living apart Lettton filed by her husband and which is due for a hearing before Judge Edward T. Bloomn in the Berkshire Probate Court on September 16. Mr. Mellen set up that desired this arrangement so he could convey real estate without his wife's signature.

MELLEN'S SECOND MARRIAGE.

When Mrs. Mellen arrived at the Maplewood Tuesday she telephoned to the Mellen estate in Stockbridge for her four minor children to come here to see her. This was done. The two girls arrived in the morning and had luncheon with their mother. The two boys arrived later in the day and had dinner with her.

Mr. Mellen is sixty-four; his wife forty-six. They were married at Brooklyn on November 15, 1893. It was Mr. Mellen's second marriage. By his first marriage he had a son, Graham K. Mellen, now of New Haven.

Mr. Mellen filed his separate living petition the first of this month. He accused Mrs. Mellen of desertion. He charged that, beginning January 1, 1912, she absented herself continually from home, sometimes without his knowledge, for periods of a week to a month.

He stated that on september 17, while Mrs. Mellen was away, she learned that he had gained possession of letters written by her and that she had since remained away from him.

It was alleged that some of these letters were to H. Douglas Brown, one of the assistant managers of the Hotel Vanderbilt, New York.

On November 23, last, Mrs. Margaret Brown, wife of H. Douglas Brown, brought suit against Mrs. Mellen for $100,000, alleging that Mrs. Mellen had alienated Brown's affections. She charged that immediately after the Browns were married, Mrs. Mellen wrote affectionate letters to Brown, gave him expensive presents and sought opportunity to be in his company.

When Mrs. Mellen arrived here last Tuesday her counsel said that she had submitted for a year to false charges because she hoped to spare the children notoriety, but she could no longer submit in absence. Mr. Warner added that Mrs. Mellen alleged that her husband caused a suit to be brought in New York city which was unwarranted and which was part of a propaganda that had brought the whole family into unpleasant notoriety.

GERMAN TOWNS ARE BOMBED BY ALLIES

By International News Service.

London, Aug. 23.—Many towns in Germany, including Frankfurt and Cologne, have been heavily bombed in the past two or three days by allied aviators, it was officially announced today by the British Air Ministry. In addition, several German aerodromes were attacked and heavily damaged. The text of the official announcement follows:

"On the night of August 21-22, military objectives at Frankfurt and Cologne were attacked. Very good results were observed and bombs were dropped all around the stations and barracks.

"The railway junction at Treves was also successfully attacked. All our machines returned safely. Four hostile aerodromes were heavily bombed and many hangars hit.

"Machin guns were freely used on farmers, trains, searchlights and anti-aircraft guns. One of our machines is missing. (This is believed to refer to another operation.)

"On the morning of August 22 one of our squadrons attacked the chemical factories at Mannheim. During heavy fighting on the outward journey two of our machines were brought down. The remainder reached and successfully bombed the objective.

"Very fierce fighting again took place on the return journey, as a result of which five more of our machines are missing. Three hostile machines were destroyed. Two of these were seen to crash and one went down in flames.

"Two other squadrons attacked the railway sidings at Cobients at about 7:30 a. m. and a hostile aerodrome at Hagenau with very good results. All of these machines returned safely. One hundred and ninety-four tons of bombs were dropped by night and 215 tons by day."

JAMES G. BOWDER OF MELROSE, DEAD AT 82

Melrose, Aug. 23.—Word was received today of the death last evening of James G. Bowden, eighty-two years of age, of No. 22 Vinton street, a prominent resident of this town for many years, who died at his Summer residence at Holderness, N. H.

Mr. Bowden was the head of the dry goods commission house of James G. Bowden & Son of No. 68 Essex street, Boston. He was active in many social and philanthropic organizations, and was one of the founders of the Amphion Club of Melrose, and of the Handel and Hayden Society. He was born in Marblehead June 21, 1836, and served on the school committee of that town. He is survived by two sons, Harold L., of Brookline, and Fred P. Borden of Melrose. A daughter, Mrs Emma Proctor, resides in Winchester. The body will be brought back to Melrose for the funeral.

MR. LOCKHART Says:—The most successful Lockhart "Mill-End" sale in our history, which closes Saturday at one o'clock, certainly stamps as rubbish the thoughts that the American people are inaccessible. Our business experience has taught us that the Americans are a wise lot who look around and are frugal in their business activity. There is a demand for the Lockhart "Mill-End" sale because the people like it. They have been taught to like it by many years of experience in buying its bargains.

SEEK WOMAN WHO CHARGED ACCUSED PASTOR HAD COURTED HER

DEAD WOMAN'S MOTHER SAYS MINISTER THREATENED TO DESERT WIFE

Harrington, Me., Aug. 23.—The name of another woman was today added to those which have been mentioned in connection with that of the Rev. Henry H. Hall, the accused Wells pastor.

It is that of a Mrs. Allen of Portland who, the authorities claim, expected to marry the pastor. They assert that he repeatedly promised to her as a single man. Efforts are today being made to locate Mrs. Allen.

Another dramatic development in the case were the statements of the mother of Hall and of the dead woman. Mrs. Hall stoutly defended her son. She declared he would prove his innocence.

Mrs. Stevens denounced Hall. She asserted that she had faced him and also that he had failed to give any money to her daughter.

MOTHER DEFENDS HALL.

"My boy is innocent," said Mrs. Zemro Hall, "and at the proper time it will be so proven. He was kind and gentle. He loved his family as only a kind-hearted husband and father would."

"My daughter is dead," said Mrs. Fannie Stevens, "dead after years of suffering and torture. After years of mental anguish and ill treatment. I won't say she was murdered, for I don't know that she was. I will say, however, that Henry Hall treated her shamefully during their married life."

Mrs. Allen, the authorities claim, was very attentive to the preacher while he was a patient at the Mariett Hospital in Portland. They state that the woman visited Hall each day and always brought flowers with her.

One day, it is said, Mrs. Allen called at the hospital while Mrs. Hall was visiting her husband. According to the story she was told that she could not see the pastor as he was being visited by his wife. This, it is said, caused her to scream and declare that Hall had told her that he was a single man and had asked her to become his wife within two months.

As Mrs. Hall was leaving the hospital, she took aside the woman, Mrs. Allen. It is said that there was a stormy meeting, but that the two women later became friendly.

"I am confident," said Hall's mother, "that my son will be proven innocent of the charge registered against him. I have no desire to try this case through the columns of the newspapers, but when the proper time comes to try Katie Gerow before a court of justice there is no question in my mind but that he will be freed.

"My first knowledge of his arrest on this charge came through reading the AMERICAN. As yet I have not heard from Henry, but I feel certain that at the right time I will. Many stories have been told regarding him. I know him to have been a lovable and kindly disposed young man.

DENIES TALK OF TROUBLE.

"To my knowledge there has never been trouble between him and his wife. They were considered quite practically every Sunday during the time they resided in Harrington. They would come here from their home over in the Wells district, then attend Sunday service.

"Frances, their daughter, was a peculiar sort of child. She has lived more or less with her mother's people and consequently was not thrown much in contact with us. I saw her since her mother was buried, but I have not seen or heard from her since her father's arrest.

"The blow must ever struck his child. He worshipped her as any fond father loving father could.

"The detectives who have been investigating the case here have called on me and I wouldn't want to have them. I certainly have no desire to talk with those who are trying to send my son to prison on a charge which I know to be entirely false."

While Hall talked with the writer, a daughter, Miss Mary Hall, sat with her in the sitting room of their little home on the bank of the Harrington river.

Hall's father, Zemro Hall, came out of the Civil War a cripple. His injuries eventually resulted in total blindness and as a result of it the government paid him a pension in the neighborhood of $100 a month.

MRS. STEVENS FEARED HALL.

Mrs. Stevens told those investigating the case that she constantly feared Hall. She asserted that on one night while he was near her house, could she sleep in peace. She also stated that Hall had been unkind to both his wife and his daughter, Frances. The fourteen-year-old girl, who stood beside her grandmother while she talked, agreed with all the grandmother said.

"Henry told my daughter," said Mrs. Stevens, "more than once that he was going to leave her. He told her that he didn't want a sick woman to care for but a wife. Further more, he asserted that he didn't want Frances, and said that she might come and stay with us.

"I heard him say to Minnie, 'I have got all I can do to take care of myself and can't be bothered with you.' Minnie told him all right, but that if he were going for him to leave in a gentlemanly way. She said that she would take Frances, as the girl was the only company she had. That day Henry appeared in a particularly angry mood and we all feared him.

"Minnie told me one day that she could not understand what Henry did with his money. She said he never gave her any of it. He had always earned money, but more often than not I was forced to supply Minnie and Frances with money and other things.

"I am seventy-one years of age, and the experiences of the past few days have been real trying on me. If I am well enough I shall go to Wells today for the hearing next Thursday and Frances will go with me. I expect that we will be there, and also expect to testify in this case."

AUTOPSY IS COMPLETED.

With the first flush of dawn today in the sanctuary of the Mill River Baptist Church, an autopsy on the body of Mrs. Hall was completed by Medical Examiner Charles Traynor of Biddeford. Last night, long after dusk had overcome the town, the autopsy was started but, owing to insufficient light, was discontinued and abandoned.

Following its completion, Medical Examiner Traynor accompanied Deputy Sheriff Ernest Jones of Kennebunk to the scene of the inflammation that Hall was a caller at the house following the funeral of his wife.

On that occasion it is claimed he told a story to Gilmore which is entirely at variance with the story he told in Wells on the night of the accident. He told Gilmore on that visit that at the time of the accident he was standing on the bridge, with his back to his wife, gazing down into the river bed on the other side of the bridge. He heard a splash and a son claiming he told him, and then turned his face to see his wife wounded down on the bed of the stream. His story in Wells was that they were standing side by side looking over the edge of the bridge at some colored seaweed, but about in the pool below. Suddenly Mrs. Hall became dizzy and lurched forward to what he thought would be her death.

Evidence has been received regarding a conversation Katie Gerow had with one Walter Phillips, a railroad man running through Wells Depot. Phillips says Katie told him that she was going to marry a man just as soon as that man's wife died. Phillips also states that he asked Katie if the man she was going to marry was the minister. Miss Gerow she wouldn't answer the question.

Declare Pastor's Wife Prevented Him from Becoming Ordained

Wells, Me., Aug. 23.—It is claimed by members of Rev. Mr. Hall's former flock that the pastor was prevented from obtaining his ordination at the Wells Depot Union Baptist Church because of his dead wife's failure to keep step with regard to certain of his characteristics.

Members of Rev. Mr. Hall's former church recall the visit of a council when plans for the pastor's ordination were suddenly called off without any satisfactory explanation to his parishioners. Plans had even gone so far as to have a banquet committee appointed, whose duty it was to solicit food and entertainment for the fifty or more visiting ministers who were expected to be present at the expected ordination banquet.

Like a bolt out of a clear sky plans for the ordination of the minister were ended. It was said in explanation that the Rev. Mr. Hall had failed to pass the educational requirements for ordination imposed by the Maine Baptist Convention.

Today the explanation of the minister's failure to obtain sanction for ordination was said at the time to be brought about by the failure of his wife, who is believed to have brought information in her possession to the attention of the Baptist authorities.

A PASTOR IS INNOCENT.

Members of the woman's circle of the church refuse to believe that their pastor could be guilty of such a crime. Mrs. Granville W. Lord, who lives near her husband occupies the house where Hall resided at the time of his arrest, is a staunch believer in the minister's innocence and defended him.

Mrs. Simon Hatch of Bald Hill, a neighbor of the Gerow family, where Misses Katie and Grace Gerow reside, and a member of the accused minister was a frequent visitor, added her belief in his innocence. She said that the entire church members of Wells who brand the preacher's character as "carrion, bologna, mongrels, and worse" Mrs. Simon Hatch said:

"I don't believe Mr. Hall would hurt a mouse. He never impressed me as a man who would commit serious sin. He was one of the pathetic, weary, washy type of ministers. He wasn't one to commit a crime, or plan as charged by the authorities. He wouldn't even step on a snake if he saw one, I really believe."

Miss Grace Gerow, with whom the deposed minister is declared to have been in love, left Wells alone for Portland. She was accompanied to the Wells Depot station by her mother, who stoutly denied the relationship of love which the minister is declared to have held toward the daughter. She said:

"Grace has only known Mr. Hall since his wife's death in June. It is preposterous to think that she was in love with him."

"Why do the reporters come to see me?" said the girl Grace. "I am not a murderer. I had nothing to do with Mrs. Hall's death."

EDWARD A. FILENE TELLS CREDIT MEN AS TO DUTY

The position of business men with respect to the war was clearly set forth today by Edward A. Filene in a speech before the sixth annual convention of the Retail Credit Men's Association. His subject was "Credit and the War."

"In ordinary times," said Mr. Filene, "the duty of the credit man involves two things. First, to help his firm sell every dollar's worth of goods that can be collected, and, second, to keep his firm from selling any dollar's worth of goods that cannot be collected. But in war time the credit man's duty becomes larger and more complicated than his duty to his own firm.

"Today business must, in spirit of the soldier who gives his life, limit the selling of every dollar's worth of goods that can be collected to the selling of only such goods as will not interfere with the war strength of the nation."

Washington, Aug. 23.—The War Industries Board today ordered a 10 per cent. cut in the tonnage of paper used by magazines, and prescribed regulations under which magazines are asked to eliminate wasteful practices.

GRAIN SHIPMENTS SHOW BIG INCREASE

Washington, Aug. 23.—There were 197,428 cars loaded with grain for the period between July 6 and Aug. 17, as compared with 134,464 cars for the same period last year, the railway administrator announced today.

GIRL TELLS OF ENCOUNTER WITH SPIES

Heroine of Maine Submarine Incident Threatened With Death if She Revealed Affair

Eastport, Me., Aug. 23.—Miss Willa Wilson, heroine of the submarine bandit incident of Tuesday, has discovered from her nerve-racking experience sufficiently to tell the story of her encounter with two supposed German spies, with a smile.

"Tuesday afternoon some friends took me across the narrow channel from Lubec in a boat," she said. "I had my bicycle, and started to ride from the southern end of the island (Campobello) home.

"I reached the Harre! Well, about four miles from my home here, and so two miles east of the other settlement of the island, Welchpool, and got off my wheel to brush up my hair, and have a cool drink of water from the spring.

"I tucked my light coat over the handlebars, and noted from my wrist watch that it was seventy minutes past seven. It was still light. I leaned over to pick up my wheel, when I felt a hand on my shoulder. I looked about and peered into the face of a strange man. Another man then stepped from the thick growth of spruce woods.

"One of the men was about thirty-five and the other some ten years older. One was smooth faced, the other had a mustache. Both had dark eyes, and tanned skin, and large red lips.

"They wore blue caps, with white visors. The caps were high in front and had white cords, with knotted ends at either side. They had blue clothes, with white braid on the collars. If they wore brass buttons I did not see them, for they wore long yellow linen dusters, tightly buttoned.

"They were both armed with long-barreled revolvers. They walked, one on each side of me, holding my wrists but were not at all rough, and had the bearing of gentlemen. They spoke good English. One of them showed me a bill-fold with money, and offered me all it contained if I would tell them the location of the Eastport Postoffice and whether a certain American boat had yet loaded and left. I refused to answer.

"When we approached the home of Barney Gallagher they dismissed me into the woods, but told me to keep on and they would call for me later on. They did so, and when we came in sight of the farmhouse of Martin Brown they left me and took to the woods again, warning me that if I told anyone I was threatening I would be shot on sight. They said they were not the only ones about."

Miss Wilson met Mrs. E. W. Finney before reaching her home and told of her experience, repeating the account to her parents.

N. E. MEN WANTED FOR SIBERIAN BATTALION

Lieutenant-Colonel F. C. Jamieson, former commander of the Eastern Division of the British Columbia Recruiting Mission and now in Canada awaiting the formation of a battalion he is to command, has been asked Major Kenneth D. Marlatt, head of the Mission in Massachusetts, today, to enlist as many men as possible for the Siberian battalion. Enlistments for this battalion will be accepted up to August 31, and all men who sign up in Boston will be sent either to St. John, N. B., or Halifax, N. S. "I would like to have in my battalion as many men as possible from New England," Colonel Jamieson said in a message to Major Marlatt today. Captain C. L. O'Brien, second in command of the Mission in Massachusetts, will be one of the officers of Colonel Jamieson's battalion.

4 HURT AS AUTO TURNS TURTLE AT SALEM, N. H.

Salem, N. H., Aug. 23.—Four persons, two of them women, were injured early today when a heavy touring car in which they were riding turned turtle at a sharp turn at Messer's Crossing, on the border line of Methuen, throwing all the occupants. All the injured were taken to the Lawrence General Hospital, where the doctors say that two of the party may have received fatal injuries. The police refuse to divulge their names. The car, which is said to have been driven by a Lowell newspaper man, was going at a speed estimated at about fifty miles an hour. The exact cause of the accident occurred is on the Salem turnpike, and the excessive speed caused the car to overturn before the driver could lessen its speed. The driver of the machine was placed under arrest by the police here. He was the least injured of the party.

SEEKS HUSBAND ABSENT FROM HOME NINE YEARS

Has anybody seen Charles Emmanuel Nelson?

His wife, Mrs. Olive Nelson, has not seen him for nine years, coming from Boston in 1909, and she believes that he is still in this city. Mrs. Nelson is now living at No. 139 Wadsworth avenue, New York. Here is her description of him: "Aged, 42; tall, rather stout; blond; very well dressed; flashy dresser, was engaged in selling stocks; lives in furnished rooms, but frequents best hotels and cafes." He was born in Sweden, but Mrs. Nelson thinks that he is a naturalized citizen of the United States.

MRS. AUGUST BELMONT NOW WAR COUNCIL AIDE

New York, Aug. 23.—Mrs. August Belmont of New York has been appointed assistant to the war council of the American Red Cross. This was announced by Henry P. Davison, chairman of the war council. Mr. Davison said: "Mrs. Belmont has peculiar qualities for service in aiding the activities of the Red Cross. She has taken up her residence in Washington and will serve for the period of the war without pay."

WOMAN SOUGHT IN DOUBLE SLAYING

Three Arrests Expected in Connection With Deaths of Man and Girl in Rahway, N. J.

Rahway, N. J., Aug. 23.—Two men and a woman are sought by the police in the mysterious double murder of Miss Edith L. Kupfer and Miss Janny of Perth Amboy, whose bodies were flung to the roadside after they had been shot in Kupfer's machine while the car was being driven at high speed through the Linden section of this place at early morning.

Robbery is believed to have been the motive for the dual killing. Miss Janny was an unusually attractive girl of nineteen years.

The slender clews which the police have to go on at present point to the method of the assassins and are in keeping with the strange nature of the case. These clews include:

THREE CLEWS FOUND.

1. A powder puff found in the Kupfer car.

2. A bag found in the same car.

3. The peculiar rasping and high-pitched voice of one of the men murderers, as overheard by Superintendent Frank Moore of the New Jersey reformatory, who heard two shots fired at Kupfer thrown, dying, from the car.

The powder puff and bag found in the machine were not owned, the police say, by either Miss Janny or by Miss Gertrude Hendrickson, who had been in the car earlier in the night. The powder puff is regarded as indicating the presence of an outside woman in the case.

Miss Janny was the daughter of Mrs. M Janny of Perth Amboy and worked as cashier of the Madison Theatre in that city.

It was reported that she was engaged to Kupfer. But her relatives say she had never had a love affair. Kupfer's closest male friend, Joseph Holcomb of Perth Amboy, says they were merely friends and that Kupfer had often said he never would wed while his mother, to whom he was devoted, was living.

Much talk was about thirty. He was superintendent and part owner of the Madison Sugar Factory. He had borne a good name.

Last Wednesday evening, after Miss Janny had finished her work at the Hotel Madison in Perth Amboy, she met Mrs. Genevieve Hendrickson, whom she had known about two months. Mrs. Hendrickson is a saleswoman at a small department store in Perth Amboy owned by Isaac Saxe. The police say that she had been a frequent visitor to the store for the past two years from her husband, who is now in training in Camp Dix.

DINED AT BEACH.

Miss Janny and Mrs. Hendrickson went to dinner at an inn at Seidler's Beach, four miles from Perth Amboy.

Mrs. Hendrickson says that at dinner Miss Janny suggested she telephone Kupfer to come, but that she, Mrs. Hendrickson discouraged the idea. After dinner, however, Miss Janny went to the telephone. In a half hour Kupfer drove up in his automobile with Isaac Saxe, Mrs. Hendrickson's employer. The quartet started back to Perth Amboy, Kupfer driving. Mrs. Hendrickson says she left Miss Janny at 10:45 at the Hotel Westminster, Perth Amboy, where she lived. Kupfer and Saxe left shortly after 10:50 near the Palace Hotel. He understood that Kupfer was to drive Miss Janny right to her home.

HEARS TWO SHOTS.

The story now takes a three-hour-and-ten-minute jump into the midst of the murder mystery. At 2 o'clock yesterday morning Superintendent Moore of the New Jersey Reformatory was awakened by a revolver shot in the street in front of his home on West Milton avenue, in the Linden section of Rahway, about ten miles from Perth Amboy.

Moore hurried to the window as a second shot rang out. An automobile was speeding down the street. Two men, standing in the machine, were talking in excited tones. One of the men, in high-pitched, rasping voice, exclaimed:

"Let's go! We got the girl's body out of the car."

"No, no, go ahead!" cried another man's voice.

Dr. Moore saw the form of a man fall from the car to the road. He said: This man was Kupfer, with the bullet in his left breast. Kupfer opened his eyes, gazed blankly at Dr. Moore, then died.

The police had scattered warning to all police officers they could reach. The death car passed the Pennsylvania station and was chased by a policeman in a taxi. It quickly outdistanced the taxi. A third policeman tried to hold up the car at Edgar road and Wood avenue, but had to get out of the way or be run over.

At four a. m. the machine was found on Linden Avenue, about five miles below the place where Kupfer was thrown out.

Two hours later the body of Miss Janny was found on the same avenue, a mile nearer Linden. The girl was shot through the brain, the bullet entering above the left ear.

"JEALOUSY," SAY POLICE.

The Janny wore a $200 diamond ring. Kupfer wore a $600 diamond ring and was believed to have had about $175 on him when the party left Seidler's Beach. One report of the cash and jewelry had been taken, another report said they had not.

But the police, in either event, say: "Jealousy, not robbery."

John A. Gallatian, chief of Middlesex County detectives, declares there is reason to believe that a woman is concerned in the crime. The detectives and police are looking for a woman, as well as for the two men seen and heard by Dr. Moore.

All efforts to trace the movements of the car and Kupfer and Miss Janny after they left Saxe near the Palace Hotel at Perth Amboy at 10:50 Wednesday night have failed.

There is a theory that their car was followed by persons bent on vengeance. Chief Detective Gallatian holds that two men and a woman followed them in another machine.

THE ONE GREAT ISSUE

Do not forget, voters of Massachusetts, that THE ONE GREAT ISSUE in the State campaign, THE QUESTION OVERSHADOWING EVERY OTHER, is the RATIFICATION of the INITIATIVE AND REFERENDUM AMENDMENT to the Constitution. The question will be on the ballot ALONG WITH SEVERAL OTHERS of much less importance. BE SURE THAT YOU DO NOT OVERLOOK IT!

The Initiative and Referendum does not SUPERSEDE Representative Government, BUT MAKES IT TRULY REPRESENTATIVE of the will of the people. It is the ONLY means ever devised whereby THE PEOPLE can ANNUL A BAD LAW which a MISREPRESENTATIVE Legislature has enacted, and ENACT A GOOD LAW WHICH A MISREPRESENTATIVE LEGISLATURE HAS PERSISTENTLY REFUSED TO ENACT. It is also the ONLY way of making it certain that THE CONSTITUTION shall at all times CONFORM TO THE DELIBERATE PURPOSE OF THE MAJORITY, and not be DISTORTED TO SUIT THE SELFISH ENDS OF AN INFLUENTIAL MINORITY.

The Initiative and Referendum amendment is OPPOSED, everywhere and always, by THE BIG CORPORATIONS, THE CORPORATION LAWYERS, AND THE CORPORATION LOBBY. It is ADVOCATED by the BEST, the MOST PUBLIC-SPIRITED, and the MOST PROGRESSIVE MEN of ALL POLITICAL PARTIES.

PRESIDENT WILSON has said of the Initiative and Referendum: "It is being proposed as a means of bringing our representatives back to the consciousness that they are bound in duty TO REPRESENT THE SOVEREIGN PEOPLE, and not THE PRIVATE INTERESTS THAT CREEP INTO THEIR COUNCILS by way of MACHINE ORDERS and COMMITTEE CONFERENCES."

The Initiative and Referendum amendment has been recommended to the people of Massachusetts by a DECISIVE VOTE of the GREATEST CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION ever held in the State, after the FULLEST HEARINGS and the LONGEST and MOST EXHAUSTIVE DEBATES. It is the LAST GREAT REFORM IN OUR CONSTITUTION NEEDED TO MAKE DEMOCRACY SAFE IN MASSACHUSETTS.

SECRET REPORT ON AIR PROBE GIVEN BAKER

Contains Much That Would Be of Value to German General Staff

Washington, Aug. 23.—A secret report on the aircraft situation, containing many disclosures not published upon the completion of the report of the Senate aircraft investigation committee, was laid before Secretary of War Baker today by Senator Chamberlain, chairman of the Senate Military Affairs Committee.

The report is designed to aid Secretary Baker in building a success upon the ruins of the old aircraft program. It contains much information that would be of very practical value to the German general staff.

Much of it is understood to contain no evidence of graft or profiteering, although such charges today to the military work which these places are under. "I was especially pleased to note the work being carried on at such places as the New Hampshire school of Agriculture, Dartmouth College and Springfield High School, and other colleges where many of the instructors instead of taking their usual vacation have applied their time to special instruction."

CROZIER PRAISES WAR WORK DONE BY SCHOOLS

Major-General William Crozier, commanding the Department of the Northeast, after a week's visit to the educational institutions of New England, said: "I am much pleased to note the work being carried on at such places as the New Hampshire school of Agriculture, Dartmouth College and Springfield High School, and other colleges where many of the instructors instead of taking their usual vacation have applied their time to special instruction."

FRANCIS SAYRE MEETS THE KING OF ITALY

Rome, Aug. 23.—Francis Sayre, son-in-law of President Wilson, has arrived at Italian headquarters, where he was received by King Victor Emmanuel and Duke D'Aosta. Sayre told them that America has raised millions of dollars for military assistance in Italy.

SLIGHT CHANGE FOR BETTER WITH FARLEY

New York, Aug. 23.—There was a slight change for the better in the condition of Cardinal John M. Farley, archbishop of New York, according to a bulletin issued by the attending physicians this morning. The condition of the prelate still is very critical, however, the bulletin said.

"Yanks Are Coming" Cheers Allies, Says Judge Lindsey

New York, Aug. 23.—Anything other than a peace dictated in Berlin after the absolute military defeat of Germany would be treason, according to Judge Ben B. Lindsey of Denver, who addressed the Rotary Club.

Lindsey came from the battle-front on August 1.

"It is wonderful," he said, "how cheerfully the boys of this country, of all races and all antecedents, are giving all of their energy, thoughts and life itself to put down the common enemy. Their coming has brought to the war-tired French and British new strength, new hope. I recall an incident that was told to me by a British officer during the tragic days of the German Spring offensive.

"We held a little village in the face of savage attacks,' he said. 'The railroad station was full of wounded and our men were falling on all sides. The situation was getting hopeless, when the strains of your stirring song, 'The Yanks Are Coming,' announced the approach of your marines. We not only held our ground, but in a few minutes drove the enemy from his positions.'"

THREE ARRESTS IN BROCKTON STRIKE

Total of 11 Now Charged With Annoying Shoe Workers. Quinn Out of Town

Brockton, Aug. 23.—Three men were arrested today on charges of intimidation of shoe workers and of loitering, making a total of 11 arrests since the annoying of employes of the shoe factories in this city began on Wednesday, as a feature of the strike.

The men held today are: Simon Valcavasina, 37, of No. 37 Arnold street, charged with intimidation; Stanislaw Rumsza, 31, of No. 229 Ames street, intimidation and loitering, and John Barkevica, 28, of No. 48 Hovenden avenue, loitering.

They were arrested outside the Douglas factory, were arraigned in court and their hearing continued until tomorrow, when the eleven cases will be heard together.

There was no trouble this morning. Police, secret service men and detectives guarded scores of men going to the factories from every railroad station and trolley line. Every few of the strikers have returned to work, following their vote to do so yesterday.

They are waiting an answer to their second telegram to the National War Labor Board asking for more specific instructions than those which recommended their return as members of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union.

John Quinn, leader of the strike, who left Brockton yesterday noon, has not yet returned. Although no statement was made as to his destination, it is understood that he has gone to Washington to appear personally before the National War Labor Board.

BAKER AND BARUCH SEEK POWER FOR WAR PLANTS

Washington, D. C., Aug. 23.—Secretary of War Baker and Bernard M. Baruch, chairman of the War Industries Board, appeared before the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee to urge prompt passage of the emergency power bill, designed to meet the present shortage of power for war industries.

ADMIRAL VON HINTZE IN FEAR OF GERMAN DEFEAT

Amsterdam, Aug. 23.—"Our cause is an exalted one, but it is in great danger," said Admiral Von Hintze, Secretary for Foreign Affairs for Germany, in an address to newspapermen, according to the Koelnische Volkszeitung. "The government, press and nation must stand together," he added, "or we will be beaten."

BIBLE IS SOLDIER'S FRIEND, SAYS FOCH

New York, Aug. 23.—"The Bible is the best preparation you can give to an American soldier going into battle or to sustain the absolute military defeat of Germany would be treason, according to Judge Ben B. Lindsey of Denver, who addressed the Rotary Club.

Lindsey came from the battle-front on August 1.

"It is wonderful," he said, "how cheerfully the boys of this country, of all races and all antecedents, are giving all of their energy, thoughts and life itself to put down the common enemy. Their coming has brought to the war-tired French and British new strength, new hope. CAPT. ARCHIE ROOSEVELT IS COMING HOME

Colonel Glad to Hear News of Boys Serving in the Great Army

Captain Archie Roosevelt, who married Miss Grace S. Lockwood of No. 111 Bay State road and who was severely wounded in France, is coming home soon.

That's what J. J. McGraw, Republican national committeeman from Oklahoma, told Colonel Roosevelt, Archie's father, as related by Mr. McGraw in dispatches today from New York.

Mr. McGraw, who has just completed a tour of the fighting front as a member of the supreme board of directors of the Knights of Columbus, brought the colonel messages from two of his sons, Major "Teddy" and Captain Archie. Later Mr. McGraw told how the colonel received the messages, saying:

"I tell you, it got under my skin a bit—the colonel's greeting. He let his hearty hand-clasp serve as a greeting and said: 'Tell me about my boys.'

"I told him that Captain Archie would soon return home and the Colonel broke in with: 'Of course he will come home. He is afraid people will call him a slacker—after what he has done.'

"When I told him that the major was improving rapidly and that he declared, at the time of our meeting, that he would be back in the fighting in three weeks, the Colonel smiled. I suppose the major is quarrelling with the nurse right now. His knee is a bit painful but he is full of fight."

A month ago Mrs. Archie Roosevelt, who was at her father's Summer place with her baby boy, Archie, Jr., said that her husband wanted to stay in France until the war was over, and that his one wish was to return to the front lines.

GEORGE T. MAXWELL.

Private George T. Maxwell, twenty-three years of age, the only son of Mr. and Mrs. George Maxwell, of No. 310 Langley road, Newton Centre, was killed in action, on July 20, according to word received today by his parents. He was a member of Company C, of the old Fifth Massachusetts, now merged with the 101st Regiment. He was born in Newton, where he attended school, and saw service on the Mexican border.

CAPT. JOSEPH D. MURRAY.

Concord, Aug. 23.—Captain Joseph D. Murray of Concord was wounded July 20, the War Department informed his mother, Mrs. Mary A. Murray of No. 6 Monument street. Captain Murray was born in Concord thirty-four years ago. After being graduated from high school, he enlisted in the Marine Corps eleven years ago. He has a brother, Major Paul Murray, with the Forty-ninth Infantry.

4 WALTHAM BOYS ON LIST.

Four Waltham boys, all members of Company F, of the 101st, are reported missing. Private John L. Flaherty is the son of Mrs. Delia Mitchell of Willow street. He is reported as missing since July 18. His mother believes he has been found as she has received two letters from him under dates of July 20 and 21. Flaherty is 20 years old. Private Arthur J. Hollinson formerly lived with his parents on school avenue, but shortly after enlistment moved to Pawtucket. He is 22. Mr. and Mrs. Everett Gallagher of River street are the parents of Private Frank A. Gallagher. Private Francis Sheridan is the son of Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Sheridan of Willow street. He is a graduate of the Waltham High School and was employed in a Waltham factory.

BAY STATE FISH CO. GETS LEASE OF T WHARF

More Property Acquired by Officials Now Under Indictment.

The old T Wharf, which was for thirty years the leading fish market of the country, previous to the Boston fish dealers' removal to the Boston Fish Pier, has been leased to the Bay State Fish Company, the members of which are under indictment by the Suffolk Grand Jury, charged with an alleged attempt to monopolize the fish industry.

When the Boston fish dealers moved from old T Wharf the Quincy Cold Storage Company leased the wharf upon which it built a large cold storage plant and made other improvements, but left a row of old wooden buildings on the pier untouched. It is the wooden buildings on the wharf that have been leased to the Bay State Fish Company, according to a statement made today at the offices of the Quincy Cold Storage Company, No. 41 Richmond street. When asked when the tenancy of the Bay State Fish Company began the officials of the Quincy Cold Storage Company merely replied that the Bay State Company had already had that portion of the pier.

Manager John Burns, Jr., of the Bay State Fish Company declined to make any statement in regard to the leasing of the old T Wharf by his company. At present the Bay State Company has plants at the Boston Fish Pier, South Boston, and a plant at East Boston, where vessels are overhauled and fitted.

It will be recalled that in the equity petition filed by the government against the so-called fish trust, one of the prayers was that the Bay State Company either be removed from the South Boston Pier or be dissolved. Acquiring the old T Wharf by the Bay State people adds another branch to their several plants now in operation.

140 GIRLS READY FOR SWIMMING CARNIVAL

All Are Ready to Go After Title in Annual Contest Tomorrow

One hundred and forty girl swimmers, numbered among them some of the cleverest aquatic performers in the country, anxiously await the start of the annual Boston AMERICAN swimming race, to be held tomorrow in the Charles River Basin. Entries for the event closed today.

Entries for the big Boston AMERICAN swim in the Charles River Basin closed today.

The race is sanctioned by the New England Amateur Athletic Association. It will start at 3:15 p. m.

Handsome prizes will be awarded the first five winners and a suitable souvenir will be given to each other contestant who finishes. The prizes are on exhibition in the Summer street store window of William Filene's Sons' Company.

COACHING FORBIDDEN.

The course is from the float of the Metropolitan Park Commission, opposite the Union Boat Club, up stream to a stake boat near the Harvard Bridge, and then back again to the starting point. The distance is one and one-half miles and 209 feet.

All starters will take the standing start from the float. The start will be by pistol. Contestants will make the turn at the left of the stake boat. A dressing tent has been provided.

No coaching from boats will be allowed, and any contestant that is coached from a boat during the race will be disqualified. Everybody is invited to see the race.

Lewis W. Keith, president B. G. A. A., will act as referee. Alex Sutherland, U. S. N., will be starter. B. Murphy, B. G. A. A., will be clerk of the course. The judges are J. S. McCullough, B. G. A. A.; George V. Brown, U. S. N.; William E. Murphy, B. G. A. A.; timers, D. S. Adler, B. G. A. A.; Leo Handy, U. S. N.; L. J. Johnson, B. S. C.; inspectors, M. M. Wellington, B. G. A. A.; M. Cohan, Boston Y. M. M. C.; W. F. Waldner, Pilgrim A. A.; W. D. Kerr, Newton C. C.

John J. (Maffitt) Flaherty will be in charge of thirty lifeguards, who will follow swimmers in rowboats. Dr. John H. F. Connor of Huntington avenue, Back Bay, and Dr. Cornelius T. Hurley of Dudley street, Roxbury, and a corps of women nurses will be on hand to give medical attendance if needed.

140 GIRLS ENTERED.

Lieutenant Albert Chapman will be in charge of the police arrangements, assisted by Lieutenant Bretvogel of the Metropolitan Park police. A swift police launch will keep coachers away from the contestants.

Up to yesterday there were 140 entrants. Late entries are:

Helen Hanaburg, No. 24 Greenleaf street, Roxbury.
Mary Hanlon, No. 290 Ruggles street, Roxbury.
Catherine Nolan, No. 64 St. Alphonsus street, Roxbury.
Gertrude Shelley, No. 19 Field street, Roxbury.
Anna Condon, No. 199 Chelsea street, East Boston.
Lillian Farman, No. 25 Calder street, Dorchester.
Winifred Nelson, Magazine street, Cambridge.

Westboro Tax Rate Lower

Milford, Aug. 23.—T. H. Treadway, clerk of Westboro, announces that there will be a drop in the Westboro tax rate of from $21.40 to $20.50 per thousand. The total valuation of the town has increased $25,000, which lowers the rate.

SIDNEY E. BLANDFORD, of Boston, elected president of Retail Credit Men's National Association. Photograph by Marceau.

BLANDFORD NEW PRESIDENT OF CREDIT MEN

Boston Man Honored by National Convention; Next Convention in St. Paul

Sidney E. Blandford of Boston was elected president of the Retail Credit Men's National Association at the close of the four-day convention in the Copley Plaza today. The election was practically unanimous.

Before adjourning the delegates adopted resolutions urging the discontinuance in all business houses of the itemized monthly statement in order to release labor for war work. It is estimated that this will mean a big saving of money as well as giving many men to essential industries.

The St. Paul delegates won out in spirited contest for the next convention city.

The new president, Mr. Blandford, has been general chairman of the convention and made many friends among the delegates by the manner in which he handled all the details. He is credit manager for the R. H. White Company and is prominent in Winthrop affairs.

Robert Adams of Cleveland, O., who won a prize of $10 for his work in a membership contest, turned the money over to the Red Cross.

Retiring President L. S. Crowder of Dallas, Tex., who won an individual silver cup for his efforts in getting new members, turned the cup into the association to be contested for every year.

The H. Victor Wright membership cup was given to the Memphis, Tennessee division, which won 248 new members in the contest.

MEAT PRICES HIGHEST IN NEW ENGLAND CITIES

Washington, D. C., Aug. 23.—Nine New England cities and Washington are paying higher prices for meats than forty other cities in the United States, the Department of Labor price investigation report, issued today shows. One other city on the Atlantic coast ranked with Washington and that was Norfolk. The Department of Labor investigators are going through the country with a five cent comb in an effort to find the cause of alleged unreasonable prices.

BURNED FISHING CRAFT NOW FIT FOR WRECKERS

The fishing schooner Gertrude De Costa, which caught fire off the Boston Fish Pier, South Boston, yesterday, while loading gasoline, keeled over on her side during the night and today is a fit subject only for a wrecking crew. The schooner caught fire in practically the same spot where two other Portuguese schooners have been burned while taking on oil. Only one man, a seaman named White, was injured. At high water the wreck, lying on the South Boston flats, is entirely submerged.

SCHRAFFT EMPLOYES SALUTE THEIR NEW FLAG

A flag raising was held today in the dining room of the Schrafft Candy Late Company at Shawmut avenue in which all the employes stood at attention and saluted the flag. A patriotic address was made by E. J. Smith, superintendent of the printing room. A gold star is on the company's service flag in honor of Dominick D. Nodica, who was killed in action.

ROXBURY MAN KILLED LEANING OUT CAR WINDOW

Nils A. Iverson, thirty-five, of No. 9 Commonhill street, Roxbury, was instantaneously killed today. Iverson, a motorman for the Boston Elevated Railway Company, was a passenger on a Kingsborough-Washington street car, and while leaning out of the window of the car was struck by a car coming in the opposite direction. He leaves a wife and family.

ALLEGES CRUELTY BY HUSBAND; ASKS DIVORCE

Mrs. Florence A. Walker of Malden has filed a suit for divorce against her husband Charles F. Walker of Wilmington. They were married in Malden, December 31, 1912 and have since lived in Saugus.

TIP OF FRIEND CAUSED HUTZ' ARREST

Lawrence Man Tells of Insults Heaped Upon U. S. by Doctor and Others

Lawrence, Aug. 23.—Dr. John C. Bowker, a well-known resident of this city, and a noted lecturer and traveler, who has traveled much in Germany, and was an intimate friend of Dr. Rudolph Hutz, the Boston chemist and alleged German spy, furnished the tip to the government which resulted in the arrest of Dr. Hutz, two days ago, at his Summer camp in New Hampshire, it became known today.

Dr. Bowker has entertained Hutz at his home here on several occasions. He had been aware of the alleged proceedings in which Hutz was involved for several weeks before his arrest. When he first became aware of it, he wrote to A. Mitchell Palmer, custodian of alien enemy property in this country, tipping Mr. Palmer off on a deal about to be consummated.

HAD ENTERTAINED HUTZ.

Today, Dr. Bowker in speaking of the incident, said:

"Friendships which meant a great deal to me, were cut off when the war began. Dr. Hutz, who was arrested Wednesday afternoon and several other men, often came to my house in Lawrence and were close friends of mine. Until the war broke out, I bore the insults they heaped upon my country smilingly.

"I knew right along that Dr. Hutz and the others had more than a passing interest in the Kaiser, and I was aware of their increasingly dangerous activities against our country.

"I repeatedly urged the alien property custodian to put a stop to their actions. In my latest communication to Mr. Palmer, I was assured that investigations on a large scale were in progress, and that developments would soon follow.

MADE MAPS OF CITY.

"I am not averse to hiring a German house girl, but there is a limit. These Germans should not be allowed to remain in any official position. No German should be allowed to reap the benefit of profiteering at the nation's expense, while our boys are giving their all for the cause over there.

Dr. Bowker stated that in 1912 he entertained about six Germans, who came to Lawrence, and through his influence were shown through the mills, given all informations regarding water power, and shown the reservoirs. They were also further assisted in making maps of Lawrence, its roads, and furnished other information in regard to every industry inquired into by the visitors, supplemented by photographs, which Dr. Bowker assisted in taking.

It is expected Hutz will be brought back to Boston from New Hampshire by Boston police in charge of Federal officers. Upon his arrival here he will be committed to the East Cambridge Jail, where he will remain until Monday morning, when he will be examined by United States Attorney Peyton, who is away at present.

BOSTON AUTOIST FINED $100 IN QUINCY COURT

Edward T. Harris, of 81 Stephen Street, Boston, was fined $100 in the Quincy District Court today for operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor. The evidence showed that he ran his car on the railroad tracks near the Quincy station Aug. 4. The car was damaged.

JURY'S AWARD TO PASTOR BUIS CUT DOWN

Verdict of $5,000 Excessive, Rules Court in Salem Slander Case

Salem, Aug. 23.—Rev. Frederick W Buis, who last February recovered $5000 from Leroy B. Philbrick on a charge of slander, must return $3500 of that sum within 10 days or the verdict will be set aside and a new trial will take place on the issue of damages alone.

This was the decision of Judge Christopher T. Callahan, before whom the case was tried, handed down today. According to his statement the verdict for the plaintiff was fully warranted by the evidence, but the damages awarded were excessive. He has accordingly fixed damages at $1500.

Philbrick was a parishioner of the Rev. Mr. Buis, who resigned his pastorate of the First Baptist Church here following dissensions between the two factions. Mr. Buis contended that Philbrick had spread reports about him which prevented him from securing another pastorate. He is now pastor of a church in New Bedford.

MAN KILLED IN AUTO ACCIDENT AT SALISBURY

Newburyport, Aug. 23.—One man is dead, two are seriously injured, and one of the latter is held by the police on a charge of manslaughter, as the result of an automobile accident today in Salisbury. The victims were taken to the Anna Jaques Hospital, this city, where Zachary Brew, thirty-five, of Brooklyn, died. The others will recover. They are James T. Maguire, twenty-four, of No. 178 Valley avenue, Port Richmond, N. Y., and Robert Barr, twenty-nine, of No. 118 Drake street, West Brighton, N. Y. Maguire, who was driving the car, is the man held. All were employes of the Atlantic Corporation at Portsmouth, a shipbuilding concern, and were on their way to Portsmouth. The car overturned at a sharp curve. According to the police, Maguire was under the influence of liquor.

McCALL 'SLUGGED'; LAWSON FOR SENATE

Financier to Preach on Text: "Murder of Sam McCall by Big Boodle"

fate how the results of the famous 'leak investigation' were arrived at. Two reporters were reprimanded and the big bugs got off scot free. The only thing that ever came out of this investigation were 'pretty beautifully bound books, of which I have copies."

Mr. Lawson went on: "I have already chosen the committee in which I shall hand my resignation the day I am elected, to take effect when I shall have put through these three investigations.

"This committee will consist of President Wilson, ex-President Roosevelt, ex-President Taft, Chief Justice Hughes, President Emeritus Eliot of Harvard, Samuel Gompers, Louis A. Brandeis, Bishop Lawrence, Cardinal O'Connell, William R. Hearst, Samuel McCall and John W. Dittemore, head of the Christian Science Church.

"I don't need any campaign manager nor any press agent. You bet being to be a political demagogue. The trouble with politicians is they have too much to talk about."

STARTS LAWSON WAR FUND.

"I will have only one little sermon to deliver, 'The story of the murder of Sam McCall by 'Big Boodle.' That's my text and I'll stick to it.

"I have postponed the giving away of the two horses, bull and bulldog, at the Marshfield Fair today, and have organized the 'Lawson War Fund, a corporation. The horses and other animals, as well as two of Mrs. Lawson's bracelets from Tiffany's, worth $10,000, will form the nucleus of a war fund which will make the no-called melting pot look like tea strainers against a cauldron.

"I am going to visit every fair in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts between now and election to sell tickets for this fund. And I'm going to flash around all political Americans, Democratic and Republican, for the same purpose. I will be the only original evangelistic ticket seller for the only original thousand-ringed circus.

"For example, I shall walk into a Walsh rally tonight. I shall sell tickets and I shall speak, using the text: 'The murder of Samuel W. McCall by Big Boodle.'

"Then tomorrow night I will walk into a Weeks rally. I shall offer tickets for the war fund. And I will say: 'Gentlemen, I am selling tickets for the Lawson War Fund. One of these tickets entitles the lucky parties to a chance for thoroughbred horses, pedigreed bulls, prize bulldogs, jewelry of many kinds, and houses and lots.—For I'm going to get friends of mine to contribute everything from household furniture to houses and lots to the fund.

WILL RUN ON STICKERS.

"Then I will go on: 'And also gentlemen, I want to preach you a little sermon, entitled, 'The murder of Sam McCall by Big Boodle.' I shall preface my sermon;' I know what I'm talking about.

"I am going to run on stickers, of course. And I'm going to show the politicians that the voters enjoy putting something on the ballot which the printer left off. After I've placed the high brow bunch holding my resignation will take care of my placing around.

"Lawson attended the Marshfield Fair today. Will Irwin, the war correspondent, spoke, telling of his experience at the front.

"The front will have nothing on the Massachusetts political game game from now until election," said Mr. Lawson, 'for I'm out to raise hell. And my little sermon on 'the murder of Sam McCall by Big Boodle,' will do it, too."

Thomas W. Lawson

THOMAS WILLIAM LAWSON, financier, author, sportsman. Born in the shadow of Bunker Hill in '57.

An international figure in the financial world a quarter of a century and more. His "Frenzied Finance" exposed the Wall Street money-power control of the world.

"Friday the Thirteenth" and "The High Cost of Living" were notable among his other works.

The Steel Trust, Money Trust and Coal Trust felt the jolt of his terrific pen punch.

Exposed the Louisiana note leak.

His greatest achievement: The insurance investigation. Broke up the insurance combine. Struck down the graft. Chopped off exorbitant salaries paid to chairmen and big millionaire officials. Forced down the rates for benefit of the insured.

Mr. Lawson lives on his 650-acre estate, Dreamwold, Hayyn. Two of his sons are "over there." The third is also in the service.

"How Was Weeks Elected?" He Asks; Also Probes Senator's Bank Affairs

In his speech at the Marshfield fair yesterday, Mr. Lawson bitterly assailed Senator Weeks, and the "gang."

He said that the foundation of the fortune which struck down the Governor was laid on "persons now in insane asylums, convicts in penitentiaries and some in poor widows and starving children."

Mr. Lawson's announcement that he would run against Senator Weeks was made at the fair. Candidates for Governor, Lieutenant-Governor and Congress and men in political life from every section of the State thronged the fairgrounds with thousands of spectators summoned by Mr. Lawson's promise to tell the story of how Governor McCall was "chugged" and "slugged" in the short but fatal campaign.

ANNOUNCEMENT CHEERED.

The announcement of his intention to make the run against Senator Weeks held the audience spellbound. It was a complete surprise. The audience paused in silence, gazing on the tall figure of the financier author as he stood in the centre of the big stand overlooking the race track.

A voice broke the silence. "We're with you, Tom." Then the crowd cheered.

"My friend, Samuel W. McCall, the war Governor of Massachusetts, is dead of the best men who ever stood on two feet.

"He today is unaware of the story that I am going to tell you. With broken heart and shattered nerves, he is on his way to the north woods, in solitude, his career cut down at the time he could be of the greatest service to his country. He is dying.

"As I left him today he said: 'Tom, I do not know what you are going to say and I do not ask you to tell me. But in what you say, Tom, be as kind and good as you can, because I love you can. I am going away to rest, Tom, and I carry my disappointment with me.'

"They murdered his career, at the time he could be of the greatest service to his country. They threw it into the discards, where it lies today, and they did it to score off me; one of the greatest careers of promise in the history of the country. They slugged and thugged him at a time when his twenty years of experience at Washington would have been of value in the critical period of our country's life and would have been of inestimable benefit to the period after the war when wise and constructive statesmanship will be so necessary for our protection."

HAD PEOPLE'S CONFIDENCE.

Mr. Lawson here recounted the unfailing confidence in Governor McCall of the people of his old Congressional district whom he served so long. He described the "constructive leadership" which won the State back to the Republican party and of his independence as Governor in "fighting for the principles desired by the people and no requests to the bosses of his party."

He continued:

"For a quarter of a century I have been his friend and confidant. In the last ten years I have helped bind up his wounds, always in the back, where he was struck by the dagger in the hands of his own party leaders.

"Sam McCall was a statesman. He was a man of courage, of high principle and lovable qualities. A scholar, a statesman, a faithful husband, a proud father and a loyal friend.

"He went to Congress poor and he came back at the end of twenty years poorer. At Washington he held positions of trust and responsibility. He was chairman of one of the most important committees, which by the lifting of the finger or the winking of the eye to Wall Street would have brought him millions.

"In his poverty he was graceful and dignified. It was not the poverty of the politician with brass bands to advertise.

"I would like to be United States Senator,' he used to say. 'I hope they will let me use my twenty years of experience for the advantage of the people.' Then he would pause, and add: 'But I suppose my party of it see to it that I won't get advertising in the press, an advertising that I couldn't afford to pay for.'

"BOODLE CAUSED DEFEAT."

"When Sam McCall asked the citizens of Massachusetts to send him to the Senate, it was not as before, when the Legislature had the say. You remember the fight. It was made by Sam and his son, on a bankroll of $482, against the combined wealth of the State against men who thought no more of spending thousands, yes, tens of thousands, for a vote than of drinking a cup of coffee.

"You recall he fought bravely. He was within two votes of victory. The legislators went home over Sunday. Boodle got in its work, and John Weeks, my stock-broker friend, was sent to fill the shoes of Sumner.

"They told Sam that if he'd be good and 'wouldn't disappoint the party' he could have anything he wanted. But Sam was not that kind of man. He did not want anything but honor at that price. They sandbagged him, and slugged and robbed him of what was his. He took it gamely. He didn't cry or whimper. 'Tom,' he said, 'this all a part of the game, I suppose and you have to take it as it comes.'

"I wanted it,' he said, 'but I didn't have the price. If I had I wouldn't pay it.'"

"You remember the announcement of his candidacy. He said it in a dignified way, in the language of which he is master. It was a noble appeal to the people.

AROUSED PARTY BOSSES.

"How was it met? It brought down the wrath of the party bosses. They said Sam must not oppose John Weeks. 'If Sam McCall dares to run, God help him. No one else will.'

"'Will see whether boodle will tell the people that they can't go to the United States Senate,' we said to him. Then one of the Boston papers printed a collection of editorials from the Republican press of the State. They used to appear to hurt him patriot and statesman. What did they say of him now? Charles Francis Adams and they struck below the belt. For 'daring to oppose John W. Weeks, to whom the office belongs.'

"They slugged him. They put him down and out. And they struck him again after he was all in. Big Boodle slugged him. Boodle was everywhere, as if it was so much dirt.

John Weeks got it. Big Boodle got it. Has he?

"God Almighty, who rules with a wonderful wisdom, puts pebbles in the highway to get under the toe of the fleetest runner until the poor catch up. Yes, and it breaks their damned necks."

JOE TYNAN AND TOMMY SHEA ON IN C. A. C. RING

Crack Young Lightweights Will Mingle in Windup on All-Star Bill—Show at Lowell

CARD AT COMMERCIAL A. C.

Main event—Tommy Shea of New Haven, Ct., vs. Joe Tynan of Philadelphia, ten rounds.

Second ten-round bout—Joe Flynn of the North End vs. Louis Strona of Newport, R. I.

First ten-round bout—Al Girard of the North End vs. Sammy Diamond of Newport, R. I.

Curtain raiser—Mike Castle of Lawrence vs. Bob Josephs of the South End.

Referee—Larry Conley.

Starting time—8:30.

By RINGSIDE.

Joe Tynan, Philadelphia battler, who meets Tommy Shea of New Haven, Ct., in the wind-up event of ten rounds at the Commercial A. C. tonight, comes to the Hub displaying a classy record.

Here's a few of the good boys Tynan has been up against: Jack Britton, Jack Dillon, Yorke Best little men; Billy Estey, Battling Reddy, Benny Volgar, Young Rosner, Zulu Kid and Harry Leonard.

As Shea has had a lot of experience, he and Tynan shape up as a good pair to draw.

Louis Strona, North End flash, has a large sized contract on his hands when he faces Louis Strona in the second ten-round affair. Strona showed last week with Billy Burke and looked outweighed, put it all over the Lynn biffest.

As carrying plumbers' tools around is mighty good exercise, Al Girard is in fine shape for his ten-round tilt with Sammy Diamond. According to reports from the jackies at Newport, Al will need to be in good trim, as Diamond is some "sparkler," they claim.

Mike Castle of Lawrence, will try and stop Bob Joseph's mad career in the opening event at six rounds.

Paddy Owens of Cambridge and Barney Snyder of Roxbury, two of the fastest stepping 118-pound bifists hereabouts, meet in the windup event at the Crescent A. C. of Lowell tonight. Their twelve-rounder should be full of action. The two juveniles already have had several meetings and the "Roing" was sizzling hot every time.

The preliminaries will be furnished by Charley Parker of Roxbury, who is traveling high, and Kid Francis of Lawrence; Dan McCormack, sometimes most efficient East Boston battler, and Billy Woods, rugged Manchester, N. H., boy, and Jeff Gallant of the North End, and a Lowell unknown, who is reported to be considerable of a bear-cat.

Gossip of Gloveland

IT WILL be Harry Greb, Pittsburgh middle-weight, vs. Tommy Robson of Medford, in the main mess at the Arena next Tuesday night. Greb has been substituted for Jack Britton. The Pittsburgher is a demon battler, in fact, rated a scrapper champion by a lot of shrewd critics.

* * *

BRITT'S NEXT date is with Young Terry McGovern, Philadelphia lightweight, at Lowell Labor Day night. They boxed in the same ring last Friday night, Britt winning after twelve robust rounds. McGovern registered quite a bit, so drew a return booking.

* * *

MAFFITT FLAHERTY, well-known Greater Boston sportsman, corking good biffist in his day, was a Revere life guard and alternate referee with Larry Conley at the Armory A. A. is mourning the death of a young trucker, who was killed in action on the Western front. Young Flaherty was a first lieutenant in the 101st Regiment.

* * *

THE JAMAICA KID, who outstepped Joe Rivers at the Arena a few weeks ago, meets Lew Anderson, another brunette, at Trenton, N. J., tomorrow night.

JOHNNY HOWARD and Jeff Smith will settle the championship of Bayonne at the Jersey City ball park tomorrow night. They are listed for eight rounds, the Jersey limit.

* * *

JOHNNY DUNDEE has been forced to pass on a bout with Rocky Kansas on account of his eyes. Dundee got in the scrap with Johnny Tomby, Monday night. Johnny has been advised by his physician not to don the mitts for some time.

* * *

NEWARK, N. J., promoters are trying to bring Billy Shea and Battling Levinsky together September 5.

PINCH-HITTER BUSTS UP GAME FOR GIANTS

Chicago, Aug. 23. — The Giants gained a league on the Cubs, though they don't do them any good, as the North Side athletes are in front by nine games. Today, when they won a ten-inning battle, 4-3. Toney shaded Vaughn and helped win his own game by opening the extra canto with a single. Burns followed suit, Flack sacrificed and Lew McCarthy going up for Benny Kauff, doubled, tallying both runners.

TEWKSBURY GOES OUT WITH MASTER LOWERY

Paul Tewksbury and Eddie Lowery, Lieutenant Francis Oulner's former caddie, finalists in the Press Club golf tournament, were to meet this afternoon at Wollaston over the 36-hole course for the General Taylor cup. In the semi-final round Tewksbury, showing all his old skill, defeated A. M. Hoxie, 6 and 5, while Lowery vanquished J. J. Slate, after a keen contest, 2 and 1.

Edgar and Morrison Tie

L. L. Edgar and H. K. Morrison tied for the Class A prize at the monthly golf competition of the Engineers' Club at Brae-Burn.

Amateur Baseball Notes

HARRIS A. C. of the North End, 18-16 year-old class, want a game for tomorrow. Manager Paul De Frank, No. 18 Harris street.

ST. PATRICK'S Alley Boys of Watertown, 15-year-old class, have an open date tomorrow. Phone Manager Charles Colligan, Newton North 170.

ROXBURY PIRATES—16-17 year-old class, want Saturday games in August, September and October. Phone Manager, Roxbury 2506-W.

Corbett's Corner

By JAMES J. CORBETT.

Back in the bygone days of baseball this condition existed: Umpires were treated as honored guests at every ball game. Sounds unbelievable, doesn't it? But it's true.

James Wood, who began playing baseball many years before Hans Wagner was born, has given to me many of the intimate details concerning baseball in the era long before the National League began. And that's one of them.

Wood started his baseballing career in 1859 and was a star for more than fifteen years. He recruited and managed the Chicago White Stockings of 1858-1870—the team that startled the baseball world by defeating the phenomenal Cincinnati Red Stockings in a thrilling series.

Wood played in a time when baseball was young and abounded in incidents both romantic and sensational. He has told me many of these stories. And from time to time I shall recount them in this column because I know that they must appeal to the mighty interest in every lover of our national game.

TREASON TO DISPUTE UMP.

On the subject of umpires, Wood, who now makes his home in Florida, told me:

"It was considered something akin to treason for a player to dispute the decision of an umpire in my day. He was always the guest of honor—and players outdid themselves in trying to make him favors and courtesy. We had no regular arbitrators then, but chose ours from the crowd just before game time.

"Umpires in my day didn't stand back of the bat or behind the pitcher. They took a position near to home plate—and they always sat in the easiest chairs that the players could get them. Very often the chair would be nicely fitted up with extra cushions, so everything would be as comfortable as possible for the official.

"On hot days the umpire was provided with a fan; on cool days sweaters and coats were placed at his disposal. He was a king.

"The umpire was always provided with a small boy to act as messenger or water-boy.

"Only once during my early career did I ever see or hear of a player showing anything but utmost solicitude for an umpire.

"That was in the early 60's, when a rather hot-tempered youth called out on a close play at first, said to the umpire as he was walking past him toward the bench:

HOW TIMES HAVE CHANGED.

"I think you made a big mistake."

"The captain overheard the remark—and immediately expelled the player from the club. And that night several of his former teammates, incensed by his unchivalrous conduct toward the umpire, waylaid him and gave him a good whipping.

"After each game in those days, it was customary for the home team to serve refreshments.

"He was given all the beer—the favorite thirst quencher then—that he cared to drink. If he didn't like beer it was only necessary for him to say what he wanted—and he got it.

"When refreshments had been served and time came for departure from the park all the players would group together and then give nine rousing cheers for the umpire.

"I smile as I contrast the treatment of umpires of the 50's and 60's with the treatment accorded them today."

And, so does everyone else.

THREE-HEAT RECORD HUNG UP BY MAY BIRD

By GUS DALY

With the smashing of records, and an afternoon filled to the brim with the very best of light harness sport, Greater Boston circuit meet at Combination Park, Medford, was finished up in splendid shape. The crowd was the largest of the three-day session.

The feature event, the 2:10 pace, went to the Boston mare, May Bird, she was full of speed and had to be, as James Albert and Michigan King were at her wrists in the stretch run. The miles, 2:08½, 2:08¾ and 2:09, established a New England record for three heats on a half-mile track.

Mary Forum was much the best in the 2:20 trot, after Betina took to hurdling at the turns. Lester Dore drove Baskin so well she earned second money.

The 2:16 trot was not settled until six hard heats had been raced. The winner was Earlwood L. The fifth mile, 2:11¾, earned for Earlwood L. the distinction of equaling a fifth heat trotting record made by Harry T. S. at Troy, N. Y., in 1917.

GEERS PUTS OVER TWO GRAND CIRCUIT WINNERS

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Aug. 23.—Four heats were required to decide the Poughkeepsie Stake for 2:12 trotters, the feature of the Grand Circuit card, June Red, driven by Pop Geers, was the winner, with Chilcoot second and Alma Forbes third.

Un captured the 2:09 pace in three straight heats. Geers scored his second victory of the day when he came with Peter June in the free-for-all trot for three-year-olds. The Royal Knight won the Hudson Valley stake for 2:16 trotters.

Six Assists for McInnis

Stuffy McInnis just about hung up a big league record for first-baseman, when he worked in six assists in the Bush-Davenport battle. His sharp defensive play is what made the tally so close.

Tuscaloosa Hangs Up New American Sprint Mark at Saratoga

By ED CURLEY.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 23.—If the horses here don't stop breaking records, old Father Time will be ringboned, spavined and crippled by the end of the racing season.

Tuscaloosa hung up a new American mark for five and one-half furlongs when she won the Schuylerville Stakes in 1:06 3-5, and Jyntee lowered the six-furlong time record when she captured the Salem Handicap in 1:10 2-5.

Tuscaloosa's victory marked the first triumph of the meeting for State Racing Commissioner John Sanford. The race was for two-year-old fillies, and was worth $3,300 net, exceeding six hundred value by several hundred dollars.

Irrespective of its intrinsic value, Mr. Sanford was pleased because Tuscaloosa is a home-bred filly. She is by Chuctanunda-Sadaquada.

Tuscaloosa had a big pull in the weights, and, as she had raced in the Spinaway Stakes, last Saturday, finishing third, was installed favorite. She left no room for doubt, sprinting into a long lead and winning pulled up by ten lengths.

Lyke and Troxler were the jockeys in the Salem Handicap. Kathleen, West's champion filly as a two and three-year-old, was the favorite despite the fact that she has been more or less a cripple for the season.

Jockey O'Brien got her away in a tangle and the big mare was roughly jostled when she squeezed through an opening. She rang to second place in the stretch, but just as she appeared to have Jyntee beaten, stopped and pulled up fourth, dead lame. Viva America and Fairy Wand closed fast, the former obtaining second money by a head.

HOW TIMES HAVE CHANGED.

"I think you made a big mistake."

"The captain overheard the remark—and immediately expelled the player from the club. And that night several of his former teammates, incensed by his unchivalrous conduct toward the umpire, waylaid him and gave him a good whipping.

Dempsey His Own P.A., Says He Boxes Jess Willard Sept. 28

Dayton, O., Aug. 23.—Jack Dempsey, leading heavyweight contender, who stopped Fred Fulton in twenty-three seconds a few weeks ago, gives it out here that he is matched to fight Jess Willard.

The bout will be staged in Philadelphia and will take place September 28, announces Dempsey.

As the bout is to be held in Philadelphia it will only be a six-round affair, but the Fulton-Dempsey match was only scheduled to go eight rounds.

Dempsey says Jack Keller here tomorrow night. His next bout is a four-round set-to with Willie Meehan in San Francisco, Labor Day.

Release Notice Given All Members of St. Louis Browns

The players on the St. Louis Browns have all been notified by letter of unconditional release and after September 2 every one of the players, including the great Sisler, will be free agents.

From the way things shape now, it looks as if the boys would be all dressed up with no place to go.

The news did not please the players, many of them signing last year that they get paid until Oct. 15.

One thing is certain, and that is that President Ban is not exactly optimistic regarding baseball in 1919.

SERVICE TUG-OF-WAR AT N. E. TITLE GAMES

The New England A. A. U. at a meeting at the Hotel Puritan, completed all plans for the annual championship meet on Tech Field September 14. A special feature will be a tug-of-war for men in the service. Teams of twenty-five men on a side will enter, with Tech championship rules governing. There is also a possibility that a chariot race for service men will be arranged.

The regular A. A. U. events decided on are 100-yard dash, 880-yard run, 120-yard hurdles, 440-yard run, 220-yard hurdles, 2-mile run, 220-yard dash, and mile run. The field events are: Running high and broad jumps, shot-put, hammer-throw, pole-vault and javelin-throw.

SERVICE DOUBLE-HEADER AT BRAVES FIELD SUNDAY

Another service double-header has been arranged for next Sunday at Braves Field when the Boston Section Team will meet the Little Building Headquarters nine in the first game, which will start promptly at 1.30. The big game of the afternoon will be the Radio School team vs. Hingham Naval Training Station game.

As has been the custom in all the Sunday service games at Braves Field, admission will be free.

The Radio School Band will be on hand to furnish music throughout the afternoon.

COLLYER'S SELECTIONS AT SARATOGA.

SOX AND BROWNS AT IT AGAIN AT FENWAY

Cleveland Loses Chance to Climb as Barrow Brigade Drops Game to St. Louis

By NICK FLATLEY.

With the margin between themselves and the Cleveland Indians the same as before, the Red Sox took the Browns on once more this afternoon. They were beaten yesterday, 1 to 0, but the defeat wasn't harmful, as Cleveland spend the day getting plastered by the Senators.

Every day now that the Indians do not gain is a good day, so yesterday will have to go on the favorable side of the ledger.

Long Dave Davenport pitched great ball against the Sox. That was a good thing in a way, as it went toward preparing them for the Ban-Sterling line-up and the post-season tilt with the Cubs.

Long Dave held the Sox to six blows, and, while Bullet Joseph Bush was in fine form, he weakened a bit in the fifth and let doubles by Hendrix and Austin chase a run across.

Apart from that the game was merely one of those quick no-run affairs, with fair fielding and too good pitching for any excitement.

BRAVES KEEP RED SOX COMPANY FOR ONE DAY

Pittsburgh, Aug. 23.—The Braves get away for Cincinnati after today's game with the Pirates. Roy Sanders made it two straight by getting the decision over Dick Rudolph, 3-0. The Braves outhit the Corsairs, but wasted their eight drives, while Leach, Carey and Sanders inserted their blows at such times as Rudolph was unsteady.

ADVERTISE YOUR WANTS IN THE BOSTON AMERICAN

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

RUTH BEST BET IN TITLE GAMES

By HUGH S. FULLERTON.

Doping the World's Series this Fall is a hard job; it presents more problems than any I ever have known. We are confronted with conditions never before known in baseball, and we face the further chance that before the big series starts one or both teams will be changed by losses of men.

In tackling the proposition I must insist upon one thing, which is that, having figured the position values and individual values of men, I must be permitted to alter those figures if, before the series starts, the men figured upon shall quit their teams and others be substituted for them.

We must start by figuring the Chicago Cubs against both the Boston Red Sox and Cleveland Indians, because at this time it looks as if either may win.

The dope, as I have explained for many years, when it is applied to a world's series, indicates not the playing strength of a team for a season; not the individual strength of a player, but the strength of team and player against a certain other team and certain other pitchers.

FUNNY SERIES TO DOPE.

As an instance, the New York Giants, doped against Vaughn and Tyler of Chicago, would not look to be a very strong team, whereas, if we were doping them against the Boston Braves, the figures might indicate that they are about the best team in the world. They are (against the Braves), but they are not against any other clubs in the National League.

We are certain to find another odd piece of dope this Fall, which is that the figures certainly will indicate that some players of only moderate ability will figure to be near-Ty Cobbs and that pitchers who, we are sure, are only slightly above average, will figure to be perfect Walter Johnsons.

This is due to the fact that while the average strength of all the teams has been greatly reduced during the season, some of the players are just as good as ever.

A good man nowadays figures higher by many points than he would have done last year, and is, of course, that much greater in team value.

You can see quite readily that this is true by looking at the wonderfully swollen batting averages of Merkle, Mann, Flack, Hollacher and others of the Cubs, as well as the improved hitting of some of the Red Sox players.

LOTS OF GOOD PITCHING.

These increases are due to two causes—first, the confidence and inspiration that arises naturally from winning, and second (and greater), to the weak pitching against them.

The problem for us is to figure how these averages will be affected by the better pitching they must encounter in the world's series, as we are certain to discover the fact that the reason for the present position of all three clubs is due primarily to the fact that they alone of all the sixteen teams have had consistently good pitching.

I have an idea that the Cubs will figure to be stronger in a series against the Red Sox than against Cleveland, and that Cleveland will figure stronger against Chicago than the Red Sox will.

That's due to the fact that Vaughn and Tyler probably will figure to stop Ruth, McInnis and Hooper more than they will stop Wood, Graney and Chapman, although they may lessen Speaker's value. However, that is anticipating, which is exactly the thing from which we are striving to escape when we start doping.

The figures, I feel certain, will indicate that the quality of baseball is much lower this year than it has been in our generation in the major leagues, and with weaker teams there are, of course, more chances of an upset, and for one individual to turn the entire tide of battle.

RATES HON. BABE HIGHLY.

Imagine what effect Ruth, Wood or Speaker might have on such a series with their long hits. It becomes evident that we must study the batters, especially the long drivers, very carefully and consider not only the kind of pitching and how it will affect their work, but the grounds upon which the games will be played.

In a way it is unfortunate that the series must be played on the North Side band box in calculable distances because this Chicago, and we will have to follow Ruth, for instance, hitting on grounds with one of the shortest right fields in the country, is liable to break loose and bunt three or four balls a game over it.

Unless the Cub pitchers work perfectly against him, Ruth ought to be the deciding factor of every game played on the Chicago grounds. He hits a ball with such power that even his high flies would go into Adison street.

Tomorrow we will study the outfielders and see how they compare.

HUGH FULLERTON TELLS HOW HE DOPES OUT WORLD'S SERIES

I HAVE worked out a system by which, working from a basis of 1000, I divide each element of play and set down the figures.

I figure that the attacking strength, consisting of hitting, waiting out pitchers, long-distance hitting, getting hit by pitched ball, speed (which is taking extra bases on hits) and base running, is 540—1000 of the strength of the team, while the defensive value is 380—1000.

WORLD'S SERIES IS FAVORED BY SEC. BAKER

States He Would Not Oppose Extension of Time for Players If Approached on Matter

Washington, Aug. 23.—The World's Series will be played with the full permission of Secretary of War Baker.

"I would not oppose an extension of time for the players, who come under the work or fight order, if I were approached on the matter," Secretary Baker declared.

"The boys over there are so intensely interested in the game, and the number of men involved is so small in comparison, there is no reason why the series should not be played and I believe it will be."

Johnson States Commission Secured Baker's Sanction Before it Arranged Series

Chicago, Aug. 23.—President Ban B. Johnson of the American League gives it out that the National Commission, at its meeting in Cincinnati Tuesday, sent a communication to Secretary Baker asking his approval of the World's Series.

"Without the sanction of the War Department, the American League would not have turned a wheel toward the series," Johnson said. "I am immensely pleased that Secretary Baker is in favor of the games."

The details of the series will be announced as soon as a formal ruling by Secretary Baker is made. There is a possibility that a percentage of the receipts will be given over to war charities, although this question has not been settled.

The National Commission also is considering cabling detailed stories of the games to the American and Canadian forces overseas.

KUMAGAE DEFEATED BY WESTERN TENNIS STAR

New York, Aug. 23.—Ichya Kumagae, Japanese expert, who was hailed as the probable winner of the national singles championship at Forest Hills next week, went down to defeat at the Meadow Club, in a preliminary tournament.

Walter T. Hayes, of Chicago, was the player to upset the Japanese racquet wielder for the first time since his arrival in the United States. He won two straight sets from Kumagae, 6-4, 6-4.

William T. Tilden II of Philadelphia defeated Ralph Burdick of Chicago, 1-6, 7-5, 6-2; R. Lindley Murray of California, won from Vincent Richardson, 6-1, 6-8; and Theodore R. Fell of New York, vanquished Harold A. Throckmorton, 6-3, 6-3, 6-2.

REVERE TRACK AWARDED BIG WHEELING NUMBER

Manager Nat Butler of the Revere bicycle track announces that he has been awarded the international sweepstakes. This is one of the biggest events in the cycling world and calls for a five-man race over a distance of 100 kilometers. It will be run off next Wednesday night.

The finals in the New England sprint championship and a forty-mile team race, with Wiley and Linart paired against Madonna and Corry, will feature tomorrow night's card.

CAMP DEVENS NINE IS OUT WITH GLARING DEFI

Captain R. F. Nelligan, athletic director at Camp Devens, writes the AMERICAN challenging all city baseball associations and teams in New England for a game, or series of games, with the cantonment's crack nine. His one demand is that after expenses are deducted, the entire receipts be turned over to Dr. Joseph E. Rayoroft, head of the War Department Commission on Training Camp Activities.

WILLIE HOPPE TOLD TO GET JOB OR JOIN ARMY

New York, Aug. 23.—Defending a billiard championship is not an essential occupation, according to the draft board in whose jurisdiction Willie Hoppe, 18.2 balkline title-holder, resides. Hoppe has been ordered to find a job, otherwise he will be enrolled in Class 1A of the draft.

He has appealed on the ground that change of employment would be a hardship, as he is not fitted for labor, never having performed any.

When a Girl Marries

The Bride Overhears a Conversation Between Her Husband and Betty Bryce and Is Jealous

A New Serial of Young Wedded Life

By Ann Lisle

CHAPTER V.

(Copyright, 1918, by King Feature Syndicate, Inc.)

SUNLIGHT flooded our little chintz-hung room. It wavered across my drowsy eyes and woke me. On no other morning of our honeymoon had I awakened to such a golden glow. I smiled dreamily to myself and thought that this day promised to make up for the gloom of last night. I lay for a while between sleep and waking. Finally I managed to open my eyes and to call tenderly:

"Jim."

I thought the love note in my voice might make him forgive me for the night before. There was no answer.

"Jim—Jimmie dear—what time is it?"

Silence.

I sat up and looked reproachfully over at Jim's little four-poster—its covers were tossed back. It was empty.

My heart gave a quick, suffocating leap, and then I arose and pattered slipperless over to the little white-tiled bath. It was empty.

The world seemed empty, also. The fifth day of our life together and my husband had begun the morning without a word to me. He hadn't even run the water for my bath.

Had Jim hurried out without waiting for me to waken because he was angry with me for what had happened the night before? Or had he gone out with quiet tenderness, leaving me to sleep so late because he guessed that I had lain awake weeping until dawn? Or—had he gone to her—to Betty Bryce?

My fingers shook and trembled as I tried to dress. I knotted the laces of my white sport shoes—twice my blouse fastened itself all wrong and the little bow at my throat hung askew. At last I was ready.

I hurried down to the little pergola where we had breakfasted each morning on red raspberries, thick cream, coffee and corn muffins—we had always agreed even about breakfast! From the inner dining room I could see Jim out in the little Summer house.

So he hadn't waited for me—he wasn't even at our accustomed table. Another step brought me to an open window, through which I could see the corner where Jim sat—opposite Betty Bryce.

I stood for a moment, leaden-footed and leaden-hearted. Then I heard my husband's voice:

"You must forgive and understand, as you always have. I can't tell her yet. I'm afraid to tell her. You understand—and she doesn't."

Then Mrs. Bryce's reply:

"Of course I understand, dear boy, and there's nothing to forgive. Everything between us is just as it has always been."

As I stumbled away from the window I fairly crashed into the table behind me. For a tense second Jim looked up. Had he heard the rattle of china and silver? Had he seen me?

A Secret Overheard

I turned and fled. Jim was apologizing for his wife! Betty Bryce understood him—was assuring him that everything between them must be as it had been before. What had there been between them? It was almost too cruelly plain!

Up to the little room of our love I stumbled and flung myself across my unmade bed. At first the tears wouldn't come, then—the pain in my heart was so bitterly dry . . . Then sobs shook me, and I gave myself up completely to my grief. I felt as if I could never be happy again. There was no use in fighting—there was nothing now for which to fight.

Suddenly I felt a touch on my shoulder—Jim's hand. I shook it off and stumbled to my feet. My dress was crumpled and my eyes dry—Betty Bryce had been lovely in her cool linen. I was at a cruel disadvantage.

From panic I felt myself sweeping to resentment—wild anger—the hatred they say is so near to love—flooded my veins. Jim looked so cool, adorable. I wanted his love, and it had gone back—where, perhaps, it belonged—to another woman.

I fairly pelted my husband with ugly, icy words that seemed to fall about him like hailstones.

"I heard what you said—in that woman! I know what she was to you. Even on our honeymoon she followed you! And you dare to tell her that she understands you, and I don't! I married you without knowing? Well, I know now!"

A Tender Answer.

Jim stood looking at me for a minute, that seemed an last forever. I waited. Would his voice be sharp and cutting like mine when he replied? Would his words bread hate? Did he scorn me for—listening? His eyes were very grave—black and deep and still. I wanted to reach out and clutch back into silence my ugly, bitter words—sped arrows that had found their mark, and killed his love, perhaps.

At last he spoke, and my husband's voice was grave and earnest and tender.

"Anne, little Anne! You don't understand. She is an old friend—a wonderful woman. I was with her husband when the Germans shot him down. That is a real tie, you know. You didn't respect it last night. But I would never apologize for my wife's mind, merely making sure that no woman—not even Atherton Bryce's wife—should misunderstand you."

"Jim—then you aren't angry?"

"Only sorry, little Anne. Only longing for my wife . . ."

"I thought you'd begun to hate me when I woke and found you gone. I thought you had begun to get—tired of me."

Jim laughed—a full-throated laugh. Then he strode across the room and caught me in his arms and set his lips on mine. Nothing was explained, but I was happy.

Defeated, I felt triumphant—I could still make him tremble with love for me.

"Now I'll go make it right, Jim. I'll apologize—I don't mind. I'll tell her I'm sorry for last night."

Jim laughed again—there was a command in his voice and there was pleading, too.

"Apologize, indeed! I'll not have my sweetheart eating humble pie for Betty Bryce or any other woman. You shan't leave me, Anne. I want you here—here in my arms!"

LEMON JUICE TAKES OFF TAN

Girls! Make bleaching lotion if skin is sunburned, tanned or freckled

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of Orchard White, shake well, and you have a quarter pint of the best freckle, sunburn and tan lotion and complexion beautifier, at very, very small cost.

Your grocer has the lemons and any drug store or toilet counter will supply three ounces of Orchard White for a few cents. Massage this sweetly fragrant lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands each day and see how freckles, sunburn, windburn and tan disappear and how clear, soft and white the skin becomes. Yes! It is harmless.—Advertisement.

FRECKLES

Don't Hide Them With a Veil; Remove Them With Othine—Double Strength

This preparation for the removal of freckles is usually so successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion that it is sold by any druggist under guarantee to refund the money if it fails.

Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of Othine and remove them. Even the first few applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength Othine; it is this that is sold on the money-back guarantee.—Advertisement.

Removes Wrinkles and Refreshes Tired Faces

As the skin tends to expand in warm weather, causing wrinkles, a hot water astringent lotion should be used frequently to dissolve the surface dead cells and shrink the pores. Make a half pint by witch hazel. Bathe the face with it and see how quickly the wrinkles and furrows will disappear—and how much younger you look. There is nothing better for sagging cheeks or double chin, or for wrinkled throats.

Use this simple lotion during the heat of the day and you will find it wonderfully refreshing. You will lose that wilty, tired look. The ingredients of course are perfectly harmless. Be sure to ask the druggist for powdered saxolite.—Advertisement.

TO be sure she could inform John Butler that his mind was now all right.

She laughed bitterly to herself as she reflected on the way in which he would receive such an assurance from her. He would resent the suggestion that he had ever been mentally unsettled—in short, that he had been a hypochondriac. What man would not be angry at such an accusation?

She could not explain to him that it was more his mother's fault than his. He was not the sort of man who would allow any one to intimate that his mother was to blame for anything.

She might as well be honest with herself. She was afraid to confess the truth, for she wanted to help Douglas to the full extent of her power.

She stood still, as if a sudden self-revelation smote her.

Yes, she wanted to help Douglas. At first that had been her one aim. But now another desire exceeded that. She wanted to stand well in Butler's estimation. She realized that it mattered tremendously to her what he thought of her. She had learned to depend upon his friendship.

Was "friendship" the correct word? She asked that question sternly. Before she could answer it another question thrust itself into her brain.

Was friendship the only feeling that she herself had for John Butler?

CHAPTER XXXI.

HAD Elizabeth Wade suspected what really took place between John Butler and Clifford Chapin on the evening of the departure of the latter for the West her thoughts would have been more agitated than they were.

Butler was certain that Clifford Chapin had some ulterior motive for suggesting that he drive a part of the way to Midland with him. He did not suspect what this motive was, but was rather curious to find out. His instinct told him that it was connected in some way with the girl whom he knew as Clifford's cousin.

Perhaps, he mused, the former's son was going to request the young college man to be less attentive to his relative.

As this idea Butler smiled sardonically. Miss Moore might be Chapin's cousin, but she was so far his superior that it was difficult to associate them even in thought.

Elizabeth Wade had been in Butler's mind and in his heart ever since his first conversation with her. He had tried to banish her from his fancies, but all in vain. He had argued with himself that even if it were possible to win her love she would not be happy with him or in the set to which he belonged, but he appreciated that such arguments were futile.

The one thing of which he was absolutely sure was that with each passing day he cared more and more for this girl.

Under such conditions it was irksome to feel that a man like Clifford Chapin had upon her the claim of kinship. To be sure, such a claim was only an accidental one. Yet Butler chafed at it.

Therefore, it was with a start of relief—which his companion mistook for consternation—that he heard Clifford announce that Lizzie Moore was not his cousin.

He did not make this statement until he had driven to the Four Corners, at which John Butler had planned to leave him and the car and walk home.

Fraudulent Hair Remedies

Woods Hutchinson, M. D., a writer of wide renown, says: "The strongest and most powerful curative element of scalp-tonics and hair-restorers is their smell, and the next powerful is their color. Most of them are harsh, pure and simple, and produce no effect whatever except upon the imagination and the nostrils of the users. The most common constituent of them all is alcohol, and the next common probably ammonia, or some aromatic oil or extract which has the double advantage of a powerful odor and of producing a mild sense of warmth and local irritation. All of this class are mild irritants to the skin and produce a light temporary reddening, by an increase in the amount of blood circulating through the scalp; but this has about as much effect on the hair-bulbs as the beams of the harvest moon have upon growing cabbages." The only sure way to benefit the hair and scalp is to keep them clean and free from dust and disease germs. For this purpose Sirt's Head Wash, the scientific shampoo, is most highly recommended because it is made of Refined Soap White of Eggs, Cocoin (Cocoanut Oil Glycerin and Salicylic Acid. Any doctor will tell you there are no better things known for cleaning the hair and scalp.—Advertisement.

RECIPES THAT SAVE WHEAT

(The following recipes are reprinted by permission of Good Housekeeping, the nation's greatest home magazine.)

WHEATLESS BROWN BREAD.

One cupful cooked oatmeal; 1-3 cupful molasses; 1 cupful sour milk; 2 cupfuls cornmeal; 1 teaspoonful soda; 1 teaspoonful salt; 1 teaspoonful baking powder.

Add molasses to oatmeal; sift soda, baking powder and salt with cornmeal, adding to it the oatmeal; stir in the milk and beat thoroughly; turn into a well-greased mold and steam three or four hours.

OAT MUFFINS.

Two cupfuls oat flour, 4 tablespoonfuls cornmeal; 4 tablespoonfuls baking powder; 2 eggs; 1 teaspoonful salt; 1 cupful milk; 2 tablespoonfuls of margarin.

Sift together the dry ingredients; beat the eggs until light, combine with the milk and add to the mixture; stir in the margerine melted; beat well and pour into hot, greased muffin pans; bake in a moderate oven about twenty minutes. These are delicious served with margarine and syrup or honey.

TEA CAKES.

Yolks of 2 eggs; ½ cupful sugar; ¾ cupful margarine; 1 teaspoonful cinnamon; ¼ teaspoonful cloves; ¼ teaspoonful nutmeg; ¼ cupful molasses; ½ cupful sour milk; 1½ cupfuls barley flour; ½ cupful walnuts; 1 teaspoonful soda; whites of 2 eggs; ½ cupful seeded raisins; 1 teaspoonful salt.

Cream the margarine and sugar together; add the yolks of eggs beaten until creamy, together with the molasses and sour milk; sift the remaining dry ingredients together, reserving enough flour for raisins; add the floured raisins and walnuts chopped fine; lastly, fold in the whites of eggs, beaten until stiff and dry. Pour into greased tins and bake in a moderate oven twenty minutes.

In the Australian high schools instruction is being given in the Japanese language, and it is also being taught at the military schools.

FEW LITERARY TRICKS

A CURIOUS literary trick, now increasingly popular, and which consists in taking some crime and telling the story in the guise of fiction, was first invented by Edgar Allan Poe more than seventy years ago.

"The Mystery of Mary Roget," in which Poe dealt with the circumstances surrounding the supposititious murder of a Parisian beauty, was admittedly based on the actual murder of Mary Cecilia Rogers, a New York shop girl, who met her death at the hands of an unknown assassin in a suburb of that city early in the last century.

Poe compared his story at a distance from the scene of the atrocity, and with no other means of investigation than the newspapers afforded. Nevertheless, the confessions of two persons (one of them the "Madame Deluc" of the narrative), made at different periods long subsequent to the publication of Poe's story, confirmed in full not only the author's general conclusion, but absolutely all the chief imaginative details by which he arrived at those conclusions.

Another of Poe's stories, "The Murders in the Rue Morgue," is similarly based on a real murder, that of Rose Delacourt in an apartment house in Paris. This murder is regarded as being the most mysterious on record. The victim was found stabbed to death in her own room, the door of which was bolted and locked on the inside, the one window being also securely fastened.

How, then, did the assassin escape after committing the murder? Poe, in his story, makes out that the murder was done by an orang-outang, and elaborates very ingeniously a theory showing how the big ape might conceivably have managed its ingress and egress to and from the locked room.

The murder of Rose Delacourt also formed the basis of several other works of fiction, notably Israel Zangwill's "Big Bow Mystery," and Gaston Leroux's "Mystery of the Yellow Room." Each of these solves in its own way the mystery of the girl's death, but in neither case do the theories of the writers fit in with the known facts of the tragedy.

"OF course I do," he assented.

"Do you remember Baron Sunyea making a remark afterwards? He had been standing by and heard everything Graham said."

"Can't say that I do," Lutchester regretted, "but I remember seeing him about the place."

"You promise to say or do nothing without my permission, if I tell you something?" she went on.

"Naturally!"

"See, then, how diplomacy or secret service work, or whatever you like to call it, can gather the ends of the world together! Only a quarter of an hour ago that Japanese valet of my brother's, having searched my rooms in vain, demanded from me that formula!"

"From you?" Lutchester gasped. "But you haven't got it!"

"Of course not. On the other hand Sunyea pitched upon me as being one of the possible thieves, and cabled his instructions over."

"Have you got it?" he asked abruptly.

"If I had," she smiled, "I should not tell you."

"But come," he expostulated, "the thing's no use to you."

"So Baron Sunyea evidently thought," she laughed. "We'll leave that, if you don't mind."

Lutchester was still looking a little bewildered.

"I had an idea when I came in," he muttered, "that things were a little scrappy between you and the Japanese gentleman."

She was suddenly serious.

"Now that I have told you the truth," she said, "I really ought to thank you. You certainly seem to have a knack of appearing when you are wanted."

"Pinks—last time, I'm afraid," he acknowledged, "but I rather like the suggestion. You ought to see a great deal of me. Miss Van Teyl. Do you realize that I am a stranger in New York, and any hospitality you can show me may be doubly rewarded? Are you going to take me round and show me the sights?"

"Are you going to have any time for sight-seeing?"

"Well, I hope so. Why not? A fellow can't do more than a certain number of hours' work in a day."

She looked at him curiously.

"And yet," she murmured, "you expect to win the war!"

"Of course we shall win the war," he assured her confidently. "You haven't any doubt about that yourself, have you, Miss Van Teyl?"

"I don't know," she told him calmly.

Lutchester was almost horrified. He rose to his feet and stood looking down at his companion.

"Tell me what on earth you mean?" he demanded. "We always win in the long run, even if we muddle things about a little."

"I was just contrasting in my mind," she said thoughtfully, "some of the Germans whom I have met since the war, with some of the Englishmen. They are taking it very seriously, you know, Mr. Lutchester. They don't find time for luncheon parties or sight-seeing."

"That's just their way," he protested. "They turn themselves into machines. They are what we used to call suckers at school, but you can take my word for it that before next Autumn they will be on the run."

'PHONE GIRLS ANGRY OVER CANDY TALK

Endicott Repudiates Charge That They Consume 30 Tons a Month

Telephone girls are up in arms over a statement from the offices of the Food Administration that they consume 30 tons of candy a month. Think of it. Sixty thousand pounds a month or 360 tons a year!

"That's just the same as saying that we are unpatriotic," declared the chief operator of one of the big down town exchanges indignantly. "We don't eat anything like such an amount, and I don't know where such a statement could have started. It certainly isn't true."

E. H. Ansell, luncheon manager of the company, at No. 119 Milk street, himself a member of the Massachusetts Food Conservation Committee, was not only indignant, but executive. He called up the offices of the Food Administration.

APOLOGIZES FOR STATEMENT.

"I asked Mr. Endicott about the statement, and he said he had not made it," Mr. Ansell told an AMERICAN reporter. "It went out under his name, but he was not responsible for it. The member who did make it has apologized to me by telephone and has promised to retract the statement.

"As a matter of fact, our girls began to conserve sugar before the State Food Administration asked us to. We have not had the open sugar bowl on our lunch room tables since last Fall. And let me show you what we are doing in the way of conserving on candy."

He led the way to the lunch room on the fourth floor of the building, where more than 2,000 meals are served daily. Here confections are kept for sale, in open boxes, so that the girls may buy by the piece after their luncheon or tea.

2,000 POUNDS IN MONTH.

"The largest amount they have consumed for any one month,'" said Mr. Ansell, "is 2,000 pounds; and that was the maximum, mind you, before we conserved as much as we are doing now. And about 300 pounds is that amount, and you will have as much as all the girls in the whole Metropolitan District use.

"Not only that, but we have special 'war candies,' which contain little or no sugar.

"The Food Administration allows 55 per cent. of sugar in candies. The largest amount we have in any one variety is 40 per cent., three kinds have 20 per cent., four kinds have about 12 per cent. of sugar, and the rest have none at all. I have arranged with the manufacturer who supplies us to put on the market fifteen special varieties which conserve sugar. One of these is a honey nougatine, with no sugar at all. One has a pineapple filling, one is just peanuts coated with chocolate, and others are made with molasses, corn syrup, honey and glucose.

"By these restrictions we are saving approximately 1,200 pounds of sugar a month—and were doing so before the recent restrictions on sugar went into effect.

GLAD TO HELP UNCLE SAM.

"Not only that, but the girls have acceded to all this without a single complaint, glad to do their share and co-operate with the food laws, and now to have this said about them—!"

"But don't they have candy given them?" suggested the interviewer, recalling one popular girl who got 17 pounds on Christmas Day.

"That wasn't lately," said Mr. Ansell. "Some time ago this company requested patrons not to send the girls candy, and they have generally respected our wishes. It has been suggested to me also that the girls may eat a good deal of candy in their homes. They do not. Why should they, when they can get sweets during the day? It stands to reason that the girl who has had all the candy she wants isn't going to eat more when she gets home. It is the girls who go without it all day who do that.

"I don't have candy here because I want to, but because I have found it the best way to conserve sugar. When we didn't carry it, what did the girls do? Went out in all kinds of weather, crossed the street out here in mud and slush, shouted at by truck drivers, and obstructing traffic, in order to buy candy which had a large sugar content, and was often of inferior grade."

MISS MOORE IS SERIOUS WHEN OFF STAGE

Critic Considers Her One of Best Laugh Provokers Showing Before Footlights

By FRED J. McISAAC.

If people were just the same off the stage as on they wouldn't be actors. I don't know what they would be, but they wouldn't be that. And yet you always expect a continuation of the role or character you have just seen when you meet the creator afterwards.

I had a chat with Florence Moore yesterday. Miss Moore is the funniest woman on the stage that I have seen in long time. She just ripples spontaneous comedy. You don't think of her as playing a part; you figure that the part was written around her.

Yet Miss Moore, off the boards is somebody else again. She shook hands very gravely, omitted the hitch and kick which accompanies her ordinary action on the stage. She was almost uncannily serious.

The very lady who had just been standing John Arthur on his head while she twisted him into the most preposterous shapes remarked: "It given me great pleasure to have had such a success in Boston. Boston is such a cultured city, and the audiences are so appreciative. I am really still excited about our opening and am just as joyous as I can be."

SHOWED UP WHEN SHE SMILED.

She said this with all the gusto and effervescence of a minister reading the service for the dead.

That speech sounded familiar and I finally remembered that Lady Macbowe used to like that, and Nance O'Neil after she had walked in her sleep in "Macbeth," and I have no doubt that Charlotte Cushman and Mrs. Siddons and the Peg Woffington used it with effect.

"I have been in Boston many times and was so kindly received at Keith's, and I especially remember an engagement in 'Hanky Panky.'

"Why, that must have been ten years ago."

"No, indeed."

"I must remember."

"Don't remember. Forget it," she said with a touch of the Florence Moore who puts people in hysterics.

"I should like to do other sorts of things than farce comedy, and I hope to some day. I didn't go on the stage to make people laugh. I had very serious ambitions and I have done serious things."

"How do you work up your funny stuff?"

"I don't. That's the curious thing about it. I worry about my wardrobe and appearance and my lines, but I never devote a thought on how to put things over. Then, when I get in front of my audience, it seems as though they make me behave strangely. I do all sorts of tricks that didn't occur to me before I went on."

KEEPS CHANGING PARTS.

"You must be easy to work with."

"Suppose some of the actors would like to murder me because I change my business so much. Don't they help it. And it makes the people laugh.

"What was the best part you ever played?

"Oh, it was in a wonderful old drama of the plains called 'Nugget Nell.' I played a Chinaman."

Miss Moore, call the stage manager. With wildly swinging arms she dashed for the footlights, and I came away. Do you suppose she meant that about playing a Chinaman?

My, how that Resinol is clearing my skin!

Resinol Ointment helps to make it possible for every woman to have a clear, soft, healthy skin, the first and indispensable requisite of beauty and attractiveness.

AYER MEN SHOW NO DESIRE TO VOTE

Very Few Seek "Absentee" Applications—Seem Interested in Army Only

Camp Devens, Ayer, Aug. 23.—Soldiers of the camp are apparently not interested in the coming State election but are paying strict attention to affairs of the camp. Very few have sought the application blank to be privileged to vote even though absent from the polls.

This is the last day applications can be made. Commanding officers are prepared to issue the application which must be filed in the office of Secretary of State Langtry on or before September 4 in order that a soldier may take advantage of the absentee voting law and vote at the coming election on November 5.

Applications have arrived from Connecticut for the registrants of that State and are being distributed by the commanding officers.

An investigation is being conducted into the fire which destroyed the garage of the 425th Motor Truck Company and consumed twenty-three trucks of the Quartermaster's Corps and four motorcycles at a loss of approximately $150,000.

Several non-commissioned officers rushed into the burning building at the risk of their lives and saved four trucks before burning embers made the work hazardous.

McCAIN TOURS CAMP.

Major-General McCain is making a complete tour of the camp. He has visited the base hospital, ordnance department and ammunition magazine and will inspect other departments today.

Preliminary instruction in grenade throwing and bayonet fighting has begun. Commissioned and non-commissioned officers will be taught the art of offensive and defensive attacks in other implements of war.

The gas defense school will open Monday under the direction of Captain F. J. Lyon and will consist of a course which will make the instructors proficient in the uses of gas and gas masks.

Lieutenant-Colonel Ira A. Smith, in charge of the Depot Brigade and division machine gun officer, has gone to Camp Hancock, Ga., for a special

Court Makes German Ostreicher Into Irish Flanagan

New York, Aug. 23.—Harry George Ostreicher, first class yeoman, U. S. Navy, is Ostreicher no longer; he made one long leap from Germany to Ireland, as far as name goes, passing only in the Supreme Court here to interview Justice John W. Goff, who permitted him to change his name to Flanagan.

"My father, Louis Ostreicher, died when I was a baby, and I was brought up by my stepfather, Thomas Flanagan," explained Ostreicher. "When I get 'Over There' I don't want anyone to mistake me for a German."

"Well, surely no one named Flanagan could be mistaken for a German," smiled Justice Goff as he signed the application papers.

course of instruction. On his return he will instruct the officers of the Twenty-fifth.

Captain John F. McAree, chief of the fire department, responded to his last alarm in camp when he answered to the garage fire. He has been transferred to Syracuse, N. Y., as commander of the guard and fire company.

Lieut. Harold J. McGauley of the medical department, base hospital, has been promoted to a first lieut. and transferred to the sanitary corps.

JAPANESE DISCHARGED.

Private Keizo Watanabe, a Japanese citizen, who was rejected from the Back Bay of Boston with the draftees of July, has been discharged upon the request of the Japanese Minister because of his citizenship.

Colonel George Bycroade has been made executive officer of the cantonment.

The reference to the camp as a training field for the "National Army" has been eliminated and all orders in the future will be "U. S. Army."

Colonel George C. Shaw of the Inspector General's Department at Washington is expected in camp to resume as division inspector. He is a medal of honor officer and one of the best marksmen in the army.

Twenty-five slackers have been assigned to companies in the Depot Brigade. They were arrested in Charlestown without proper registration cards. One of the men was invalided home from the front because of injuries to his shoulder and leg and has filed an application for discharge.

The 73rd Regiment has received 425 men from the Depot Brigade. Those chosen for the transfer being among the most physically fit for service.

BOXING MATCH FOR RADIO SAILORS

"Happy Hour" at Cambridge School Resumed in Hemenway Gymnasium

By S. HARRY FERRIS

U. S. Naval Radio School, Cambridge, Aug. 23.—The Radio sailors received the welcoming announcement of a resumption today of the "Happy Hour" in the Hemenway Gymnasium.

The program planned provided for an intercompany boxing contest and wrestling match, that has been so much talked about, between Ensign Cronin and Jazzette. Ensign Cronin has taken a deep interest in arranging for the event.

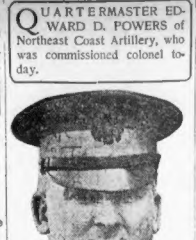
The "Happy Hour" at the Radio School differs from similar events at other military and naval stations in that it is not under the control of the Y. M. C. A. but arranged and supervised directly by the school officials.

The Radio boys are showing an unusual interest in the plans for War Service Day at the Harvard Stadium September 2. The different committees that have been appointed to arouse interest have all made reports indicating that the stadium will be represented by some first-class athletes and a big body of men who will cheer for the big enlistment.

The school will have a tug-of-war team that it is believed stands a good chance of winning first place. There will be a high-grade team entered in the Army and Navy relay race and also in the charlot race. A dark horse is being groomed for the 100-yard dash, who is likely to cover the course in close to 10 seconds, and it would not be surprising if he should break the fastest intercollegiate record for the Stadium track.

Warrant Boatswain Joseph C. Westlein, formerly boatswain mate in the Naval Reserve, is now in the department of Ensign Jarvis.

Jack Medford boy, John F. Cunningham, finished first in the last class of the former Medford Boys' Club and won a reappointment. He served as battalion commander. Myron T. Richardson of Salisbury stood second in the class and was reappointed battalion adjutant.



QUARTERMASTER EDWARD D. POWERS of Northeast Coast Artillery, who was commissioned colonel today.

Northeast Artillery Quartermaster Is Made Colonel

Lieutenant-Colonel Edward D. Powers of Brockton was commissioned colonel today. He is the quartermaster in the coast artillery of the Department of the Northeast. After graduating from Harvard in 1898 he entered the Coast Artillery school at Fortress Monroe, Va., where he took high honors.

He had been stationed at the following posts before coming to the Department of the Northeast last January: Fort Wadsworth, N. Y.; Munroe, Va.; Preble, R. I.; McKinley, Me., and Preble, Me. Prior to this he saw service in the Philippines.

SIX BROTHERS IN ARMY, GIRL ENTERS RED CROSS

Because she wanted her family to give 100 per cent. service to the country, Miss Allene Haynes, heiress and owner of a ranch in Idaho, has filed an application to enter Red Cross work in France. The young woman has five brothers in the service in France, and a sixth brother at Camp Dix. She has traveled across the continent so she could say goodbye to him before he was ordered overseas. Then she filed her application for the Red Cross.

160,000 MINE WORKERS IN YORKSHIRE STRIKE

London, Aug. 23. — Asserting that their meal hours shall be included in the prescribed forty-four laboring hours, 160,000 Yorkshire miners have struck in protest against the operators who claim the contrary.

A conference has been called to adjust the differences.

BROOKFIELD MAN, 73, READY TO GO TO WAR

Brookfield, Aug. 23.—Champ Clark, Speaker of the House of Representatives, who recently said he hoped the draft age would be raised to 50 so that he could go to war, is beaten by Albert D. Whiting of this town, who observed his seventy-third birthday by working nine hours delivering coal.

"If Uncle Sam raises the draft limit to 73 he'll find me right there," declared Whiting. "I never know what it is to be tired. I smoke a cigar occasionally, but I prefer fishing stronger than a cherry smash."

ALL male persons who have reached their 21st birthday since June 5, 1918, and on or before August 24, 1918, must register on August 24, 1918. These men should consult with local draft boards as to how and where they should register.

BAN RESTAURANT FOR SLIGHT TO SOLDIERS

Stamford, Ct., Aug. 23.—Because three United States soldiers employed at the Edgewood arsenal here were requested by a waiter in the Oxford lunch restaurant here to take a back seat on the ground that the front tables were reserved for people more likely to give tips, Lieutenant Thomas W. Jones, detachment commander of the Edgewood plant, had issued an order prohibiting the soldiers of the arsenal from eating at the restaurant under penalty of court martial.

NEW WAGE INCREASE ON YONKERS RAILWAY

New York, Aug. 23.—Leslie Sutherland, second vice-president of the Third Avenue Railroad, today announced an increase in wages for employes of the Yonkers Railway Company, ranging from one to four cents an hour higher than the increase announced last Wednesday.

FIRE AT NAVY YARD CAUSES $50 DAMAGE

A small fire in the electric crane in the chain shop of the Charlestown Navy Yard today caused a damage of $50.

Final Warning to Men of 21 to Register

By International News Service.

Washington, Aug. 23. — All young men who have become twenty-one years of age since June 25 last were reminded by the War Department today that they must appear before their local boards tomorrow and register, under the selective service law.

The only exception is in the Jewish faith, who may delay their registration until Monday.

Men in the army, navy, marine corps or allied military and naval branches of the government are not required to register. Those who are not within the United States at the time are required to register within five days of their arrival, and those who are too ill to leave their homes must register by agent, the procedure being explained upon application at the local boards.

COMES FROM CHINA TO SERVE AT CAMP DEVENS

North Adams, Aug. 23.—After traveling half-way around the globe, Gardner Carl Williams Goodrich, a former Williams College student, of Chao Kung Fu, China, a registrant in division No. 1 of Massachusetts, has arrived here and was inducted into Camp Devens for military service. Carl Gardner Williams Goodrich registered in North Adams in June, 1917. Shortly afterward he went to Chao Kung Fu with his father, Dr. Chauncey Goodrich, a missionary. He was examined at Kobain and afterwards classified at the American consulate in Pekin. Over a week ago Goodrich arrived in Seattle, Wash., and attempted to enlist there. He was a day late, the ban having been placed on recruiting, so he started East to be drafted.

Banker Control the Ruin of Railroads

Difference Between Private and Public Monopoly of Public Utilities

One of the partners of J. Pierpont Morgan & Co. has bought the New York Evening Post.

One of the most important editorials in the Post, after the change of ownership, was an attack upon government operation of the railroads.

This attack was to be expected. Banker control of the railroads has ailed them for a generation. By this banker control there has been going on constantly a transfusion of blood from the people, especially the honest stockholders, to the banking element of the country, with the private operation of the railroads as the surgical instrument. Even now that the average American investor has become anaemic and Wall street plethoric, yet Wall street hates to give up the leeching process and the leeching instrument—the private management of the railroads.

The New York Evening Post calls attention to the fact that the National Government has for years insisted upon competition and has made monopolies which destroyed competition criminal. And yet, says the Post, with an affectation of seriousness, the National Government by taking over all the railroads and all the telephone and telegraph companies, and also the express companies, has become the biggest monopolist of all.

Of course, the United States monopolizes the business into which it enters. The United States can be trusted to operate a monopoly in the interest of the people because there is no profit in operating it otherwise. The vast economies of monopoly in our vast and complicated social system are recognized. But the trouble with monopoly UNDER PRIVATE CONTROL is that the public never gets any of the benefit of the economies and becomes the victim of the power of monopoly to extort and plunder the public.

For 400 years English-speaking people have recognized the danger of private monopolies and their inevitable tendency to plunder the public. For more than twelve generations the English-speaking world has made it a crime to establish a monopoly in the necessaries of life.

But the difficulty in modern America is that our trusts and monopolies have, since the Civil War and until the Wilson administration came into power, absolutely controlled our American government, suspended the operation of the laws against monopolies, and have gone on monopolizing to their heart's content until the American trust is a byword in the uttermost parts of the earth.

Therefore, we have not succeeded in preventing monopolies. We have not succeeded in protecting that competition which our forefathers always considered the life of trade. But we have suffered all the evils of private monopolies. In the process of forming a private monopoly the small business man of America has been crushed and ruined by the thousands; yes, by the hundreds of thousands, and those who were once independent business men have been reduced to clerks and employes. The great middle class, the backbone of our democracy, has been gradually weakened, while the savings of the middle classes invested in the competitive business destroyed by the monopoly, and invested also in our railroads and other public utilities, have been steadily taken from them to augment those huge private fortunes which are menacing the safety of democracy in America.

For a generation private management of the railroads has exploited both the stockholders of the railroads and the general public for the benefit of a few insiders. The American people, especially the small business men and those whose thrift and industry enable them to accumulate savings which they must invest, would be amazed if they knew of the hundreds of millions of dollars which have been taken from the stockholders of the railroads, the street railways, the gas and electric light companies. Every ten years these private monopolies have their enormous crop of dupes from the middle classes who invest in the stocks of railroads and other public service corporations.

How do you suppose these fortunes running into the hundred millions are accumulated? Professor Parsons estimated that ninety-eight per cent. of the fortunes of ninety per cent. of the multi-millionaries in this country came from manipulations of the public service corporations under private management, by which both the stockholders and the public were plundered for the benefit of those who controlled the managers.

After all these years of uncontrolled monopolistic lawlessness a protecting providence which loves democracy gives us the Wilson administration, courageous and with the vision of great statesmen. President Wilson and his cabinet refused to palter with the tangled knot of laws against monopolies. But like Alexander, President Wilson cut the Gordian knot with one stroke by taking the railroads and the telegraph companies, the greatest of all monopolies, and making them a government monopoly.

If the New York Evening Post and the gentlemen who do not like public operation of the railroads and the telegraph and telephone companies cannot see the difference between a private monopoly and a public monopoly, then they are like the man who, pretending to be blind, undertook to prove it by staring at the sun until he actually became blind.

LET THE APPLAUSE TAKE CARE OF ITSELF

What a lot of discomfort we cause ourselves because we feel that we are not appreciated as we should be.

If we have accomplished something of a noteworthy nature we are likely to feel that people should often refer to it and that we should be placed on a plane above what we consider ordinary people.

What a foolish idea!

Even though we have done something extraordinary, why should we feel that homage should be paid us and more attention should be given us?

The really big men are so big they have no time for such unimportant thoughts, and if you want to be one of this class you must clear your mind of such rubbish.

You will need all your brain to lift you to an eminent place.

Petty thoughts make petty men.

If you would expand and grow into a man really worth while, you must forget about yourself; there must be no thought of winning plaudits.

If your ambition is to gain applause, you are not going very far up the ladder of success.

SECRET RING TORTURED LOVING WIFE

By Winifred Black

I SAW it the other day in a pawnshop—the secret ring.

It was made of beaten gold, very ancient, and set in the centre of it was a deep, glowing carbuncle, crimson like the heart of the fire when the flames are gone and only glowing coals are there, and lambent like the light, and rich and warm like the love of a true heart—but—under the carbuncle was a little secret place—you found it by touching a spring.

It was a kind of little recess which could be used for a lock of hair or a picture—or a drop of deadly poison.

I wonder what the person who first wore the ring carried there?

I knew a man once who was married to a woman much cleverer and more brilliant and much better than he in every way.

And for a birthday present the man gave the woman a secret ring, and it was not until a meddlesome child played with the ring, and touched the secret spring, that the woman learned that under the rich jewel of her ring was the tiny portrait of another woman—put there in a sardonic spirit of cruelty by the man who found this way to wreak his envy and his spite.

I have never really cared much for secret rings—since then.

And yet just think what a comfort one of them could be.

You might wear it in all sorts of places, into every kind of company, and whenever you looked at it you would remember with a little thrill the secret that it contained.

I know a woman who carries a secret ring, and in it is folded a tiny, tiny scrap of writing.

"It is not for long," says the writing, and whenever the woman is weary and sad and very lonely and a little bitter, she looks at the secret ring and smiles, for she remembers that it is not for long that she must live and suffer.

What would you put in your secret ring, if you had one?

The face of a handsome man who tells you how pretty you are?

The face of a good, honest creature who really loves you, and doesn't know how to tell you?

What is it that you carry in the secret ring of your heart today?

"WHO ONLY STAND AND WAIT"

LIEUT. J. TEMPLE GRAVES, JR., Fort Washington, Md.

"They also serve"——
But we have stood these many months,
Taut and set
To spur our small wits and high resolves
Across the burning plains of France,
And filled our souls with cannonades,
And come to dream in stuff of fire and death,
Beating our sharp fancies 'til they bled
To hold some corner of ourselves intact
From all the cataclysm asked;
Long since we dipped our souls in such a brine
That now we shiver here outside the fires
In France, and all the deaths we know
Is commonplace and waiting, and the heat
Of eager pulses in an ordered place
Far from France;
'Til we have come to think it cowardice
To anywhere be safe or look upon a woman's face
Or walk the earth outside of France;
We "also serve," but God!
See how this waiting renders us apart,
See all our hearts and dream and soul
Is leaping, fighting, dying, winning,
Tossing over there.

SIGHTSEEING INSIDE THE EARTH'S COAL

By Garrett P. Serviss

"If the ball travelling through the earth had eyes, and a more leisurely journey, what would it see?"—Harry W. Young, Chicago.

THIS refers to an article of mine about the dropping of a ball through a hole supposed to be bored diametrically through the earth's centre.

As to what the ball, or a supposititious inhabitant of the ball, would see on its journey, only more or less probable assertions can be made, because our knowledge of the state of things prevailing in the interior of the earth is still very imperfect and uncertain.

Chemist's Idea

A picturesque idea is that of the Swedish chemist, Arrhenius, who thinks that the central core of the earth, about 6,000 miles in diameter, is probably composed of iron in a potentially gaseous condition, i. e., so hot that but for the pressure it would flash into gas. Above this he depicts a shell about 600 miles thick of rock substance in the same potentially gaseous state; then a stratum about 160 miles thick of similar substance in a white-hot liquid condition, and finally the upper crust, not over 100 miles in average thickness, on whose cool surface we comfortably dwell.

Let us assume that this scheme represents substantially the real condition of the earth's interior, and further that a hole could be driven straight through the entire mass without producing any local effects upon the state of the various layers.

Then, as the ball started on its journey, it would at first be passing through what we might call the geological realm, consisting of broken and upturned layers of rock that, like torn leaves, contain the fragmentary geological history of the earth. If only the hole could be bored along a diameter where the successive leaves lay in true historical order (if such a thing were possible), the eyes in the descending ball would behold the whole story of the development of terrestrial life displayed in reverse, going back through the scons of time from man and his contemporaries through the great Neozoic, Calnozoic, Mesozoic and Paleozoic areas to the dark Azoic, when no life had yet appeared.

Wonderful Sights

Staring from the walls of the tube through which the ball dropped would appear in succession the skeletons of prehistoric men, of primal men, of ape men, of man apes, of the mysterious common ancestor of the primates and the anthropoids, and after that only of simple brutes, physical giants, many of them fighters, destroyers, mere living machines, with no foreclean of intelligence in their reptilian eyes.

At one level the first mammal would be seen, pressed in the preserving rock.

But leaving all this behind, the ball would next enter the Archean, or Azoic, stratum of the shell, where the only story told by its surroundings would be that of lifeless rocks; the stiffened foam of the spherical sea of molten minerals and metals beneath. From that point downward, through the vast shell of rock that would be gas by virtue of its heat, but is held rigid by the terrific pressure, and through the immense central sphere, 6,000 miles thick, of gaseous metals, principally iron, with, however, huge quantities of gold and other heavy metals intermingled, the way would lie to the centre.

In such a chaos of tormented matter, where heat contends for mastery with pressure, how could anything seen be described in words of less chaotic significance than their objects?

Two Years of Torture in Martyred Armenia

The only Christian Armenian girl to escape has written graphically the story of her "Two Years of Torture in Ravished, Martyred Armenia," exclusively for this paper. The second installment of this detailed recital of the wholesale massacres, the seizure of thousands of young women, for which war has been made the excuse, and of life in a harem, will appear next Sunday in the

Boston Sunday Advertiser and American
